

Energy conservation given fresh impetus

WASHINGTON (AP) — In a policy reversal, the Ford administration is raising fuel conservation to equal status with developing new sources of energy in the effort to reduce U.S. dependence on foreign suppliers.

The Energy Research and Development Administration included the increased emphasis on conservation in an updated plan for energy research submitted to Congress on Monday.

The updated report estimated that conservation could save the nation at least one-third of today's oil consumption by 1985.

ERDA Administrator Robert C. Seamans Jr. said the update "reflects widespread public reaction to the initial plan," which last June downgraded conservation in favor of developing new energy sources.

The administration said then that significant fuel savings would require mandatory conservation measures that Congress would not pass.

However, early this month the government reported a steady drop in energy consumption since 1973 due, at least in part, to conservation.

Seamans said, in outlining the new plan, that his agency has not worked out details of an aggressive conservation program. But he said it will include development of better ways to insulate homes and buildings, and elimination of pilot lights for gas stoves and heaters.

The report said conservation is much less expensive than production and can be effected more rapidly.

"It typically costs less to save a barrel of oil than to produce one through the development of new technology," the report said. "Energy conservation generally has a more beneficial effect on the environment than does energy produced and used."

Seamans said, "I believe it is impossible to exaggerate the need to make more efficient use of energy."

Each barrel saved means one not imported."

ERDA's new plan estimated that improving the efficiency of energy use could bring savings of 5.3 million to 7.3 million barrels of oil per day by 1985, an equivalent of one-third to one-half the nation's present total oil consumption.

Seamans said his agency will try to improve energy efficiency in factories, buildings and transportation, and in the generation of electricity, where much of the energy waste takes place.

In guidance, physical education

City board approves elementary programs

By GEORGE MALEK

Two long-awaited elementary programs will commence this fall.

The Washington C.H. Board of Education Monday night approved the employment of an elementary guidance counselor and an elementary physical education coordinator.

Elementary programs of guidance and physical education were named as top priorities for 1976-77 during a special board meeting last winter.

The third high priority item established at the meeting, an upgraded reading program for elementary grades, was approved earlier. The board made appropriations of some $7,000 for improved reading materials for grades one through three.

The board approved employment of former Blue Lion star quarterback Steve Ross as elementary physical education coordinator. A senior at Ashland College, Ross stressed the importance of elementary programs when interviewed. He was particularly interested in movement rather than competitive sport at the elementary level.

Donald J. Moore, an American history teacher at Washington Senior High School, was approved as elementary guidance counselor. A teacher in the system for the past 20 years, Moore has a master of arts degree in guidance and is certified as a counselor by the state.

In addition, the board approved the selection of Paul Ondrus as head football coach. An assistant coach at Bowling Green State University, Ondrus was selected from some 50 applicants for the post.

He is currently completing requirements for a masters degree in social studies. In making his recommendation to the board of education, superintendent Edwin M. Nestor stressed Ondrus' ability in the classroom as one of his major assets. Nestor noted that a football coach spends 75 per cent of his time in academics.

Nearly all of the Washington C.H. School District faculty and staff have been rehired for the coming school year.

Issuing of contracts was approved for all but two of the city's teachers and non-certified employees.

Nestor said he deeply regretted having to recommend non-renewal of two contracts in the language department. He stressed that declining enrollment, not teaching ability, had forced the terminations of employment.

The positions held by Miss Pamela Heiney, Spanish teacher, and Miss Charlene Laslie, French teacher, were not renewed. Nestor said declining enrollment in these languages would require that the board find one person to teach both languages.

He noted that while most teachers have an average of about 160 pupils per day, the combined enrollment for 1976-77 in these two classes combined was less than 140. In the interest of efficiency, one teacher certified in both languages must be hired to replace them, he said.

Nestor added that it is not unusual to find teachers qualified to teach both languages and by hiring such a person, the system would save more than $10,000.

He stressed that both teachers had done an excellent job in the classroom, and they would receive the highest recommendations for employment elsewhere.

Six other employees submitted their resignations. They were Miss Sharon Shuller, second grade teacher at Eastside Elementary School; David Young, high school English; Mrs. Carol Wood, secretary at Belle Aire Elementary School; Mrs. Myrtle Trout, lunchroom employee; Myrtle Garrett, high school social studies and physical education; and Miss Susan Bailey, high school business teacher.

Due to declining enrollment, the latter two positions will not be filled.

FINAL PLANS for the sixth grade field trip were approved Monday. The entire sixth grade class at the Middle School will participate in a two-day nature study trip at Butler Springs Christian Assembly camp May 17 and 18.

There will be some 15 different areas of study available, and each student is being asked to choose 10 courses. The class will then be divided into groups of 20 students. Each group will investigate one of the 15 areas for approximately one hour.

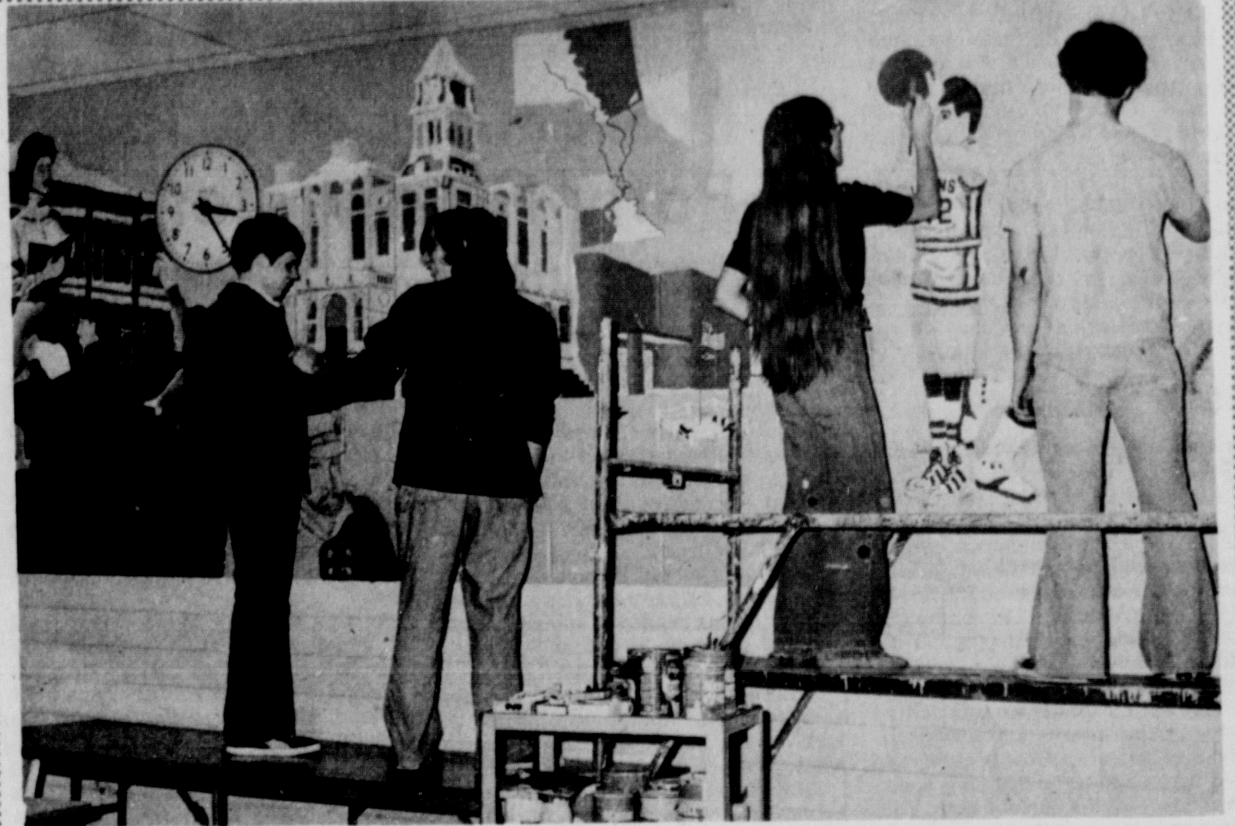

The sixth grade students, sixth grade teachers, 17 senior high school students, and several other resource people will participate. They will leave Washington C.H. at 9:30 a.m. Monday, May 17, and return approximately 6 p.m. the following day.

Areas of study will include geology, ornithology, map reading, pioneer living, wild flowers, tree identification, wildlife, ecology, conservation, first aid, creative writing, nature craft, water life, and nature hikes.

Dismissal from classes for sixth grade teachers at 1 p.m. April 26 was also approved. This will allow the teachers to visit the camp in the afternoon prior to the trip to prepare their instructional sessions.

Several other field trips were approved by the board. Title I students in the first grade will visit the Cincinnati Zoo May 11, Title I third grade students will visit Carillon Park at the National Cash Register Co. in Dayton May 20, safety patrol members will travel to Kings Island May 8, fifth graders at

HISTORICAL MURAL — Students at Washington Senior High School are painting a large mural on the school cafeteria wall as their contribution to the nation's 200th birthday celebration. The mural is presently 75 per cent complete and is expected to be finished in late May.

WSHS pupils trace area history

In an effort to do their part for the nation's bicentennial celebration, students at Washington Senior High School are drawing a historical mural on the main wall of the school cafeteria.

Donald J. Moore, American History teacher at the school, and Christopher Waldrup, art teacher, are in charge of the project.

One of Moore's history classes was discussing what Washington C.H. could do to honor the bicentennial, and more importantly, what they could do themselves. It was out of this discussion that the idea for the mural was born. The suggestion greatly appealed to Moore, who conveyed the thought to Waldrup for confirmation.

The two teachers had a number of meetings before the project got underway. There were color schemes to be discussed, scenes to be decided upon, and financial snags to be worked out. Finally, with the help of some drawings by the famed 1930's regionalist Thomas Hart Benton, the style of the mural was brought to life. Moore and Waldrup found that a "continual evolution" of the scenery, where one scene simply flows into another, would be the most appropriate manner in which to draw the mural.

The plan was then put into action. Tina Russell, a Washington Senior High School senior, sketched the original drawing of the mural on a large sheet of paper, which was later used to make assignments for the other workers. The mural, which attempts to represent the ethnic background of all Washington C.H. residents shows progressively the "old versus new" aspects not only of the community, but education as well.

Beginning on the far left-hand side of the cafeteria wall, the

"old" aspects are shown. The mural begins with an American Indian looking over the Fayette County landscape at the coming of the settlers and the establishment of Washington C.H. Early Washington C.H. is exemplified in the drawing of an 1867 map, which shows the facades of homes, churches and schools in the first days of the town. The mural then moves on to show the development of transportation in the county, from the Conestoga wagon through the first railroad train to a 1920 model truck.

Next is a view of Court Street as it looked in Howe's "History of Ohio" in 1846. This view includes the second Court House, the tornado of 1885, a replica of the old covered bridge once found on Court Street and the facades of several store fronts. Following the Court Street view is an agricultural scene depicting a farmer with a plow. Around the farm is an authentic replica of a seven-rail fence. Near this scene, Moore and Waldrup hope to include a copy of the "gopher ditcher," which was used to drain Fayette County fields before the tile method.

Ending the older aspects of the mural is a scene which stresses early education. The drawing is of what was at that time a deluxe one-room school house. Modeled after the old school in Jasper, it is thought to be deluxe because of its four windows and the bell tower.

Between the old and the new is a view of the south face of the former Central School on Temple Street. This is where the Middle School is now located. A class scene from around the time of World War I is pictured.

The newer aspects begin with a scene depicting four soldiers from the Korean War, World War I, World War II and the Spanish-American War. Immediately to the right of the soldiers is a map of Fayette County which is divided into towns and creeks. Progress in education is shown next in a drawing of Washington Senior High School. Standing by the play, a basketball player and a girl's volleyball player. The new aspects are ended with a view of two high school graduates who seem to be gazing back into history, just as the Indian at the beginning of the mural was looking into the future.

The mural, which is financed by a small allotment from the school's general fund, is drawn as authentically and as realistically as possible. To make sure the scenes were correctly depicted, they were checked with an 1875 Fayette County atlas, several old yearbooks (particularly the 1926 edition) and many photographs. It was not easy compiling the scenes for the mural, and students have changed ideas and added things from time to time. The student artists have had to draw and redraw, and as both Moore and Waldrup commented, "It's not been easy." Still, as they look at the progress they have made, they can see it is a feat of which to be proud. The mural is about 75 per cent complete, and will hopefully be finished in late May.

Although the project is open to all classes at Washington Senior High School, Sandy Harris, Sue and Tammy Pope, Jack Stump, Becky Tolle, Dick Welch, Bryan Connell, Keith Wightman, Kathy Lehman and Mark Heiny have done most of the work.

On May 8, which is "History Day" at Ohio Dominican College, Moore and Waldrup hope to compile color slides or prints and a commentary on the mural to exhibit.

Ceremonies to be held May 9

Hospital project dedication set

Dedication of new facilities at Fayette County Memorial Hospital has been scheduled for the first day of "Hospital Week," May 9-15.

In recent months, the hospital has added a new wing of patient rooms, expanded the emergency room, increased the laboratory facilities, extended the pharmacy and revamped the medical record keeping section. Dedication ceremonies will be held at 1:30 p.m. May 9.

Tours of the new facilities will be arranged immediately following the dedication. Tours will be scheduled until approximately 3:30 p.m.

The new facilities will be dedicated in the name of the late Wilbur Welton who donated the funds used in the renovation project.

Several other matters were discussed Monday night at a hospital board of trustees meeting.

The board approved the purchase of a new blood testing machine at a cost of $6,400. The old machine which counts blood cells has deteriorated and is in need of replacement.

Diagnostic equipment for stress on heart muscles will be installed at the hospital. The board authorized Dr. M.A. Jan, a cardiologist from London, to establish the stress testing center which can give early warning of probable heart attack in individuals.

In addition, the board approved remodeling of two patient-care rooms for use as physical therapy centers.

Administrator Robert L. Kunz announced a new smoking policy to be enacted at the hospital. He said whenever possible, smoking patients will be assigned rooms separate from non-smokers. He added that smoking by hospital personnel will be restricted to specific smoking areas.

Through a bequest from the Edith J. Kennedy estate, the hospital will purchase three new cribs for the pediatric wing. The estimated cost of the units is $500 each. Mrs. Kennedy contributed $5,000 to be used to upgrade pediatric care.

The board authorized Kunz to dispose of obsolete equipment at the hospital. Kunz said this will be done in the near future either at auction or by sealed bids.

It was noted that total bed capacity of the hospital now stands at 101 beds.

STATISTICAL reports for March showed 349 admissions totaling 2,229 inpatient days. There was an average of 71.90 persons in the hospital each day. This represented 82.46 per cent occupancy of the hospital and 92.57 per cent occupancy in the medical and surgical division.

The average length of stay in the hospital was 6.08 days, with an average of 6.97 days in the medical and surgical division.

There were 1,503 x-rays taken, 6,883 laboratory tests performed, 530 physical therapy treatments administered, and 410 inhalation treatments.

Major surgeries numbered 79, minor surgeries 78, and 1,483 persons were treated in the emergency room. Thus far in 1976, the number of emergency room treatments is eight per cent higher than during the same period last year.

The actual hospital revenue per patient day has been $112.24; the budget estimated $113.36, and the national average is $157.50, Kunz said. Actual expenses have averaged $114; the budget called for $119.83, and the national average is $146.

Total expense per admission has been $713.68; the budget estimated $749.59, and the national average is $1,327.

Freedom of press arguments heard

WASHINGTON (AP) — "What is the difference between everybody else in the courtroom going out and talking about what happened in the hearing and the press reporting it?" asked Justice Thurgood Marshall.

"The difference," replied Nebraska assistant Atty. Gen. Harold Mosher, "is one of degree."

The exchange was one of dozens between the nine members of the Supreme Court and four lawyers who argued before them Monday on the power of judges to restrict news coverage of criminal cases.

The court is expected to decide the question within a few weeks.

Before the court is a judge's order that prevented newsmen from reporting most of the evidence at a preliminary hearing last October in a Nebraska mass-murder case. The hearing was open to the public.

The order was one of an increasing number being issued by judges to curtail publicity, which they contend could make it impossible to obtain an impartial jury.

E. Barrett Prettyman Jr., a Washington lawyer representing news media challenging the Nebraska order, said such orders are ineffective and an unconstitutional prior restraint on publications.

"I would be here making this argument even if prior restraints worked," said Prettyman. "They don't work. They result in rumor, gossip and speculation, which is far more dangerous to the defendant than factual reporting in newspapers."

County Attorney Milton R. Larson of Lincoln County, Neb., who successfully prosecuted Erwin Charles Simants for the October slayings, said, "I think if Mrs. Jones tells me something I am going to find it easier to put that aside than if I read in the newspaper that the evidence at a preliminary hearing showed it to be so."

Prettyman, asked by Chief Justice Warren E. Burger if he would take the same position if the judge told lawyers not to talk rather than newspapers not to publish, said an order that would be impermissible if directed at the press might be permissible if framed in a way to restrict out-of-court statements by attorneys.

Floyd Abrams, representing numerous media organizations that supported Nebraska news outlets in the case, said prior restraint on the press was "becoming commonplace and must be curbed. The power to levy prior restraints on news reporting is the power to destroy."

Justice John Paul Stevens asked what should be done about confessions that turn out to be inadmissible in court after they have been reported in the news. "We have to live with that," said Abrams.

Mosher argued that courts must achieve a "delicate balance" between the freedom of the press guaranteed in the First Amendment to the Constitution and the Sixth Amendment's guarantee of a fair trial.

Dr. Oscar Anderson

Dr. and Mrs. Robert U. Anderson and family of 16 Hali Drive, have just returned from Bethesda, Md., where they attended the funeral of his brother, Dr. Oscar Anderson, senior official in the international affairs office of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration. Dr. Anderson, 57, of Washington D.C., died Wednesday of a heart attack.

An established historian, he joined NASA in 1962. Dr. Anderson was named director of the international program policy division of NASA in 1964. He played a key role in developing space cooperation with the Soviet Union. This resulted in the successful Apollo-Soyuz joint docking mission in July, 1975.

For his contributions to the program between the two nations, Dr. Anderson received both the Superior Performance Award and the Exceptional Service Medal of NASA.

He first came to Washington, D.C. in 1958 to join the history staff of the Atomic Energy Commission. There he helped establish the agency's History Association. He was co-author of the first volume of the AEC's official history, "The New World, 1939-1946," which described the wartime origins of atomic energy research and development in this country. He received the AEC Outstanding Service Award for this work.

Born in South Bend, Ind., Dr. Anderson graduated from Oberlin College, where he was elected to Phi Beta Kappa. He earned a master's degree in history from Harvard University in 1941. He then entered the U.S. Army Air Corps and was an intelligence officer during the war at headquarters of the 6th Bomber Command in the Panama Canal Zone.

Dr. Anderson wrote a history of the command. He left the service in 1946 to return to Harvard University where he earned a doctorate in 1948.

For the next 10 years, he was assistant and then associate professor of history at the University of Cincinnati. He was among the first American historians to describe the role of science and technology in American life.

He is survived by his wife, Dorothy; a daughter, Jessica A. Botsford of Buffalo, N.Y.; a brother, Dr. Robert U. Anderson of Washington C.H.; and one sister, Elizabeth A. Stanz of South Bend.

Agnew book on stands

NEW YORK (AP) — Spiro T. Agnew's much-ballyhooed novel about a future vice president has something for just about everyone: an ambitious politician, a liberal adviser, a beautiful Cabinet officer, Israelis, Arabs, Russians and Chinese.

It is one of those books that seems designed to make people wonder, "Who do you suppose he's really writing about?"

The book jacket describes the writer. "The author, Spiro T. Agnew, lives in Arnold, Maryland, not far in miles from Washington, D.C. He travels the world. He was formerly Vice President of the United States."

The 344-page book, "The Canfield Decision," is being published by Playboy Press. Publication date is May 17, but a Playboy Press spokesman said distribution to bookstores started about 10 days ago. It retails for $8.95.

The Agnew book is the latest in a series of novels by wellknown political figures.

Queen notes 50th birthday

LONDON (AP) — Queen Elizabeth II observes her 50th birthday Wednesday after a 24-year reign that began with hopes for a second glorious Elizabeth Age but has been downhill all the way for Britain.

When George VI died on Feb. 6, 1952, and his older daughter became queen while on a visit to Africa, Britain was Western Europe's leading nation, the pound sterling was one of the world's more stable currencies, there were 100,000 British soldiers in the Suez Canal Zone, and British air and naval bases stretched to Hong Kong.

Today as the queen prepares for a quiet family birthday at Windsor

Castle, Britain's wealth and power are sharply diminished, its empire dismembered, its economy in disarray.

"Future historians will have little choice but to dismiss this period of our national life as one of unrelieved failure," the weekly New Statesman said recently. But it added: "The monarchy still appears a stable feature of our national life: perhaps the only thing that is."

The 19th century constitutional expert Walter Bagehot once commented that only three rights remained to the monarch: "the right to be consulted, the right to encourage, the right to warn."

Prosecuter attacks Patty Hearst story

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — A prosecutor, challenging Patricia Hearst's credibility as an informer, says the secret bank robbery story she told authorities was motivated by loyalty to her underground lover, Steven Soliah.

Asst. U.S. Atty. Richard Nichols, opposing Soliah's request to open Miss Hearst's revelations to public view, indicated Monday that authorities believed the convict-heiress has lied about the robbery.

Soliah is the only person charged in the April 21, 1975, robbery of a Crocker National Bank branch in suburban Carmichael in which a woman customer was slain by a shotgun blast.

"There is rational reason for disbelieving a woman who wants to look out for her boyfriend, and that's what it comes down to," said Nichols.

Miss Hearst's truthfulness is at the center of a dispute in which a major decision was due today. U.S. District Court Judge Philip Wilkins said he would decide whether to hold a full-fledged hearing demanded by Soliah's defense.

The hearing, eliciting testimony from prosecutors and FBI agents, would investigate details Miss Hearst confided about the Carmichael robbery. The government argued that the story is irrelevant because it probably is not true.

"There is certainly an element of self-servingness and protectiveness to one's friend in any statement Miss Hearst might have made," Nichols said.

Soliah's attorney, Sheldon Otis, said he could prove at a hearing that prosecutors ignored Miss Hearst's scenario of the bank robbery because it differed with the recollections of two eyewitnesses.

"Miss Hearst told them that Steven Soliah was not in the bank when it was robbed," Otis declared. The two eyewitnesses have placed the 27-year-old house painter inside the bank.

Hughes will search still at dead end

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A Hollywood bank safe deposit box maintained by Howard Hughes yielded some jewelry but further stymied those looking for the late billionaire's will, a source knowledgeable about the search says.

A source close to the Summa Corp. said Monday that officials didn't find the will Hughes associates insist he wrote and that some have said he put under lock at the South Hollywood Branch of the Bank of America.

The box held only some "not extremely valuable jewelry," the source said.

Summa runs Hughes' farflung entertainment and aerospace enterprises. Some of the people who were closest to Hughes hold key positions in the corporation.

A former top Hughes aide, Noah Dietrich, said last week that the billionaire made a will and placed it in a box at the South Hollywood bank about two years before Dietrich left the organization in 1957.

Dietrich, Gregson Bautzer, a former Hughes attorney and a spokesman for Summa, restated their belief Monday that a will exists — somewhere.

Investigators are poring over files in Los Angeles and elsewhere for clues to where Hughes left the document telling where he wanted his more than $2 billion in assets distributed after his death, a source told The Associated Press.

Several people have said Hughes indicated he wanted the bulk of his estate turned over to the Hughes Medical Institute in Miami, but so far there has been no legal confirmation of that wish.

Arelo Sederberg, a Summa spokesman, said, "There is a continuing search for a will (but) for legal reasons we're not disclosing how the search is being done."

"We're only saying we think there is a will."

If no will is found, officials have estimated that as much as two-thirds of the estate automatically will revert to government bodies as taxes.

Bautzer, a Los Angeles attorney who did legal work for Hughes for 25 years, confirmed that the box at the South

Firefighters back

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Firefighters returned to work today for an 8 a.m. shift, Safety Director Bernard Chupka said, apparently ending a day-long sickout in a contract dispute.

But "after 24 years on the throne, the queen is the only person in Westminster and Whitehall who has followed, at the very highest level, the process of top-level decision-making going back over a whole generation," Paul Johnson, former editor of the New Statesman, wrote in the Daily Express.

"She has outlasted five British prime ministers, four U.S. presidents, three changes of regime in Russia, four German chancellors, two popes, and countless French and Italian governments — to say nothing of such venerable fixtures as De Gaulle, Franco, Chiang Kai-shek and Haile Selassie."

"Only Mao Tse-tung and Marshal Tito can claim greater continuity at the top, and they are in their 80s."

Public criticisms of the queen are confined almost entirely "to the marginal aspects of her existence — her dress-sense, her voice, her ferocious small dogs — and testify merely to the poverty of the material that can be amassed against her personally," the New Statesman said.

Scottish Laborite Willie Hamilton never lets up in his campaign to abolish the monarchy, which he attacks as an expensive, useless anachronism. But in his anti-royalty book last year, "My Queen and I," he said he had never said "a cruel or critical word" against Queen Elizabeth personally.

Most Britons view the royal establishment with quiet pride.

"She's good value for money, she is," one young Londoner said.

Millions still follow the unfolding royal story as if it was their favorite soap opera. The queen and her family are still persistent headline-makers in Britain and among the country's biggest crowd pullers. Thousands throng the Mall and Whitehall every year for the queen's coach ride in October to open Parliament and the Trooping of the Color for the official celebration of her birthday in June, when the weather is most likely to be good.

The queen's oldest son and heir, Prince Charles, has matured into a serious, 27-year-old man with all the attributes Britons look for in a monarch — good looks, a sense of humor, tact, a quick mind and a talent for making people feel at ease.

This has prompted some speculation that his mother may abdicate some day in his favor. But despite the prince's popularity, most Britons would probably not favor the change for many years to come.

The queen has been less lucky in her younger sister, Princess Margaret, who has presented her with the two biggest personal crises of her reign. One was Margaret's romance with a divorced man, Group Capt. Peter Townsend, in 1955. The other was her separation this year from her husband, the Earl of Snowdon.

Because the queen is the titular head of the Church of England and the church frowns on divorce, Margaret renounced Townsend after weeks of family anguish and a fever of public speculation. And though the change in public attitudes in 20 years was reflected by the open acknowledgment that Margaret's marriage had broken down, tradition was maintained by the queen's decision to approve a separation but not a divorce.

Stocks jump at opening

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market surged higher in active trading early today.

The opening Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stock prices was ahead more than two points.

The advance was widespread, with New York Stock Exchange issues rising in price holding a 3-1 margin on those declining.

The market closed Monday on the upswing, with investors encouraged by a better than expected showing for the Gross National Product in the first three months of the year.

The market has benefited by other economic activity, analysts said, including a higher new car sales estimate by General Motors and relatively low yields in the bond market.

Reports of higher corporate profits have also been reaching the market in the past few days, giving a boost to individual stocks.

Today's early prices included American Telephone & Telegraph, up 1/4 at 56; Braniff International, up 1/4 at 10 1/4; and Sears Roebuck, up 1/2 at 74 1/4. On Monday, the Dow Jones industrial average closed at 988.11, a gain of 7.63. NYSE listed stocks advancing in price held a 10-4 margin on those declining.

Opinion And Comment

Silencing of Daniel Schorr

The well known broadcast newsman Sander Vanocur has raised a pertinent question about an even better known colleague. In essence the question is: Why should Daniel Schorr be put out to pasture by the Columbia Broadcasting System while the House Ethics Committee investigates his handling of the secret House Intelligence Committee report?

This is not just a matter of concern to journalists. The public interest is deeply involved in the implications of this episode.

Schorr, who is admiringly described by Vanocur as "the toughest and best reporter in television news," got into hot water when he made a copy of the House intelligence report available to the Village Voice. He did so after the House had voted not to release the report—but also after the gist of it already had been published in various newspapers.

There are valid differences of opinion as to the wisdom and propriety of what Schorr did. He himself apparently felt that if he did not hand over the forbidden report for publication the public would be deprived of the committee's findings. Some applaud what he did; some deplore it.

But whether Schorr's action was foolish or commendably high-principled is not the point at issue. He is not being disciplined on the grounds that he violated the unwritten canons of journalistic ethics; he is merely suspended from his reporting duties pending the outcome of the congressional investigation.

Why? What acceptable purpose is served? Writing in the Washington Post, Vanocur says CBS is "standing by Schorr in his battle with the House investigators" and is paying his legal costs. "But might it not be in order," he properly asks, "for the sake of its own reputation, and for what Schorr has come to symbolize in a medium dominated by timidity, for CBS to allow Schorr to return to active reporting? We join in asking that, and we say yes to it.

A WORD EDGEWISE...By John P. Roche

The tenure trap

A while ago we were exploring here the problems facing institutions of higher education — public and private — as their funding withers away. The focus was on the conflict between faculties and administrations over where the ax should cut. Unfortunately in a labor intensive enterprise like education there is only one way to save money: Get rid of personnel. The argument is only one way to save money: can still be heard that if the president would just get out and hustle, more funds would arrive. But unless, as occurred recently at the University of Rochester, a donor suddenly comes through with a staggering gift (over $25 million in that case), up go tuition, fees, room and board (figure $6,500-plus a year at most private schools), down go scholarships, and out go junior faculty and non-academic staff.

Since seniority and academic tenure go hand in hand, the net result of cutting faculty might be summed up by the old rule in shipwrecks: "Women and children first." The rule, of course, has been stood on its head. Instead of women and children receiving priority in the lifeboats, they have the privilege of walking the plank. If you look at the faculty age profile at most institutions, you discover a huge bulge of tenured professors in their 40s and 50s. This reflects the tremendous jump in higher education in the post-World War II period and the unfortunate practice in the lush post-Sputnik era of passing tenure out like peanuts at a cocktail party.

Indeed, the day an individual was hired there was an unarticulated presumption that after the initial seven-year period he or she would get tenure. It became almost a matter of right. There was a good deal of loose chatter about the "publish or perish" rule, but a close investigation will show that most tenured faculty at most institutions neither published nor perished in any significant scholarly sense. I was (and am still) considered a terrible spoiler when serving on tenure evaluation committees: My view is that nobody should become a tenured associate professor unless he or she has published at least as much as I did to get promoted from instructor to assistant professor without tenure.

In the late 50s and early 60s I was consistently voted down with the result that in many departments the future was mortgaged. When I argued that letting go someone marginal (in my view) would provide an opening seven years thence, I was accused of pessimism. In seven years the department would be doubled, there would be plenty of room! Besides, the candidate was a nice person — and his publication record was no worse than that of X, who had received tenure two years ago (another vote I lost). Then the bubble burst. Over 150 applicants responded this year to an advertisement for two temporary positions in a nearby political science department! (Incidentally, a department in which no one is scheduled to retire until the mid-1980s.)

So how do we make room for the really able young men and women? About 1988 there will be a great mass of retirements — my academic generation — but between now and then tenure awards will be few and far between. (The last figures I saw indicated that, nationally, over two-thirds of all faculty are tenured.)

One step would be to modify the present iron-clad tradition that after seven years, it's up or out. Devised by the Depression-oriented American Association of University Professors to eliminate the old serfdom (under which teachers could be kept on for 25 or 30 years without tenure), it is now counterproductive. Replace it with a 10-year period, renewable for five years, and decouple tenure from both status and salary — i.e., you could have an untenured full professor making $25,000 a year.

Moving from the other end, efforts should be made to encourage early retirement, say at age 60 or, using military and civil service rules, after 30 years of full-time teaching. This would involve financial readjustments, but the cost to institutions would be more than compensated by the voluntary departure of professors who are routinely going through their drill, boring even themselves, but stuck in place until they hit 65. (With the 30-year rule I could totter off in 1979 instead of being gently led to pasture in 1988!) This must be given serious consideration to prevent academic stagnation for the next decade.

Demo solons seek U.S. seats

By TOM DIEMER

Associated Press Writer

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Three

Democratic state senators, midway through their current legislative terms, are on the campaign trail in bids for election to Congress.

Two of them, Sens. Anthony J. Celebrezze Jr., D-25 Cleveland, and Donald J. Pease, D-13 Oberlin, are aiming at northeastern Ohio districts that will be vacated by incumbent congressmen.

A third, Sen. William F. Bowen, D-9 Cincinnati, is challenging the present officeholder. But unlike his two Senate colleagues, Bowen is assured a November race since he is unopposed in the June 8 Democratic primary.

Celebrezze's contest in the 20th district is unique.

The 34-year-old attorney has 11 primary opponents, including his cousin James P. Celebrezze, a former state representative. The others are Michael L. Cimaco, Norbert G. Dennerl Jr., John T. Flanagan, Donald T. Gallgher, Edward A. Ginley, Michael G. Kelly, Ronald J. Novak, Mary Rose Oakar, Basil M. Russo, and Raymond A. Stachewicz.

Whoever emerges from the pack will face independents Raymond J. Grabow and Theodore Held III in November, but no Republican. A GOP candidate has not filed.

The seat will be left open by the departure of Rep. James V. Stanton, who is running for the Democratic nomination to the U.S. Senate.

Pease, a 44-year-old newspaper editor, is seeking office in the 13th district where Charles A. Mosher, a Republican from Lorain, is retiring. Pease faces John Michael Ryan, of Lorain who opposed Mosher in 1972, and Robert C. Salkowicz, also of Lorain.

Woodrow W. Mathna, former mayor of Lorain, and Huron Councilman Peter A. Walderzak are vying for the Republican nomination.

Bowen, a 46-year-old businessman, can relax, at least until June 9. In November, he will face either Rep. Willis D. Gradison, the Republican incumbent, or William E. Flax of Cincinnati who is taking on Gradison in the primary. Independent Christopher L. Martinson of Cincinnati, is also in the race.

Bowen, Pease and Celebrezze all enjoy the luxury of a secure seat in Columbus if they fail to attain Congressional seats in Washington. All three Senate terms run until 1978.

Dear Abby:

ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

Teeth heir wants to recycle dentures

DEAR ABBY: I hope you won't think this is a stupid question, but I don't know who else to ask.

Is there some place that buys used dentures?

I have six sets that are good as new. They belonged to members of my family who are now deceased. Three pair belonged to my grandmother, and she never wore any of them for more than three months.

It seems a shame to just throw them out if they could be of use to someone. I would even be glad to GIVE them away if you could tell me where to send them.

I called my own dentist and asked if he wanted to buy them, and he said, "My God, lady, I don't BUY dentures, I SELL them!"

Please answer this as I am serious.

TEETH ON MY HANDS

DEAR ABBY: There's undoubtedly a law (with teeth in it) prohibiting the sale of used dentures. And I wouldn't know to whom you could give them.

DEAR ABBY: The letter from the 31-year-old irate bachelor who always gets the "how-come-you're-not-married" routine when applying for employment prompts this letter:

I'm 45 and divorced many years with no intention of remarrying. Ten years ago I applied for a position with the Chamber of Commerce of one of Ohio's largest cities.

The interview went very well until the man in charge said, "I notice on your resume that you're not married." Then he said with a wink, "Not a 'homo' by any chance, are you?"

I just looked at him incredulously while he went on to sermonize on the virtues of marriage and explain that the Chamber wanted a "family man" whose wife could socialize with the wives of other chamber members and how a single man was usually "unstable" and just wouldn't fit in. He made it clear that a single man was "suspect" and didn't quite have the wholesome, highly moral image they required.

A week later, the same man called and asked me to meet him downtown for dinner that evening to "talk things over." Thinking that he had reconsidered hiring me, I gladly accepted.

When I got to the restaurant he had already had a few drinks, but he wasn't drunk. He was very friendly and told me what a handsome, sophisticated, cool young man I was, and he gripped my hand and slapped my thigh.

He went on to say that his wife and kids were at the lake for a week and he enjoyed being a bachelor for a while because he was trapped in a rotten marriage, etc.

"What about the job?" I asked.

"No. Too bad. They still prefer a stable, family-type man. But how about coming to the house and spending the weekend with me, because I'm not all that straight, and I really dig the gay life?"

I simply got up, shook his hand and walked out as he burst into tears and yelled, "Go to hell, you!"

ALL RIGHT IN OHIO

CONFIDENTIAL TO "WHY, WHY, WHY?": Seldom is one single crisis wholly responsible for an emotional collapse. It's the trigger of a gun that is already loaded. Don't feel guilty.

Today In History

By The Associated Press

Today is Tuesday, April 20, the 111th day of 1976. There are 255 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On this date in 1775, the American siege of British forces in Boston began in the American Revolution.

On this date—

In 1657, Jews in New Amsterdam were granted equal rights and privileges of citizens.

In 1662, Connecticut was granted a royal charter extending to the Pacific Ocean.

In 1836, the U.S. Congress established the territory of Wisconsin.

In 1889, Adolf Hitler was born in Austria.

In 1934, Shirley Temple was launched on her career as a child star as the film, "Stand Up and Cheer," was released.

In 1945, in World War II, Soviet forces penetrated the defenses of Berlin, and the U.S. Seventh Army captured the German city of Nuernberg.

Ten years ago: U.S. planes attacking North Vietnam made their closest strikes yet to the key port of Haiphong, bombing a railway bridge.

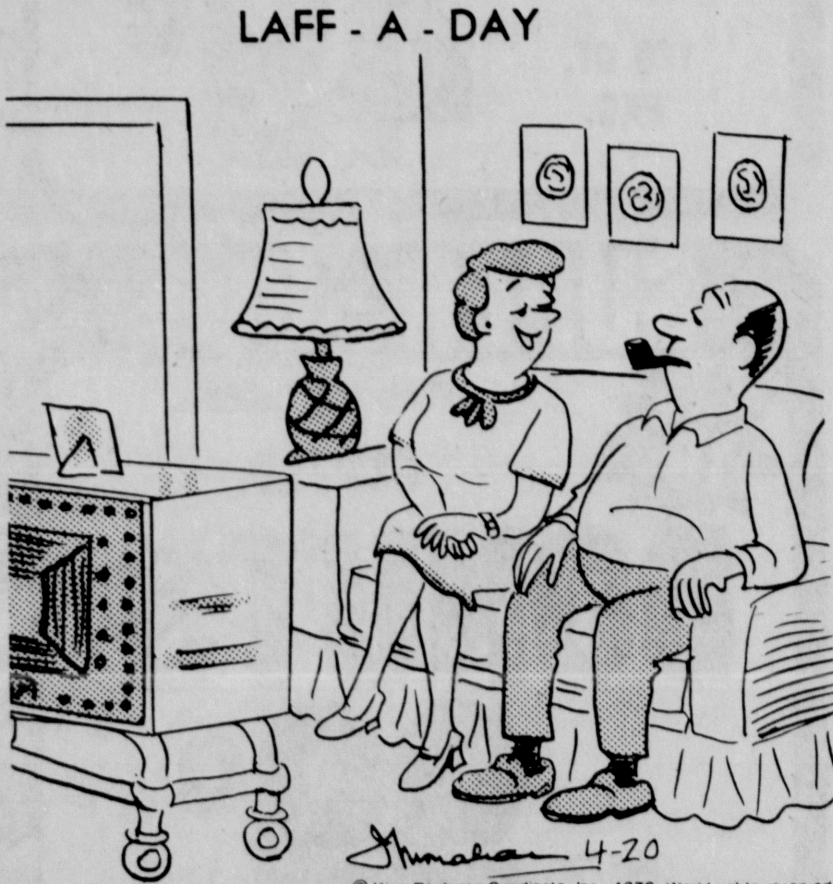

Five years ago: The U.S. Supreme Court unanimously ruled that busing of students could be ordered to achieve racial desegregation.

One year ago: Communist forces overrunning South Vietnam eased up in their drive toward Saigon but continued to cut off the city from surrounding territory.

Today's birthdays: Former New York Mayor Robert Wagner is 66. Nuclear physicist Alvin Weinberg is 61.

Thought for today: An economist is a man who knows more about money than the people who have it — anonymous.

Bicentennial footnote: Two hundred years ago today, Richard Henry Lee wrote to his fellow Virginian, Patrick Henry, that Virginia must take the lead in forming the Continental Congress into a government, and other colonies would follow.

"Let's do something different tonight, dear. You sit here and I'll sit there."

Woman saved by fireman

MIDDLETOWN, Ohio (AP) — A volunteer fireman's knowledge of the Heimlich Maneuver, was credited with saving a Tampa, Fla., woman from choking in a restaurant, Middletown police said.

Police said Mary Lou Belcher began choking while eating a french fried onion Monday.

James Cottogim, a volunteer fireman with the North Madison Emergency Squad, was also lunching in the restaurant.

Cottogim said he had recently been instructed in the antichoking maneuver and performed it on the victim expelling the food.

The method, developed by Dr. Henry Heimlich, Cincinnati, is performed by placing the arms around the waist of the victim, locking the hands and giving a quick jerk to the abdomen. Air is forced out of the lungs forcing the blockage out of the throat.

Golden Age Club to view film

A bicentennial treat is in store for the Golden Age Club on Thursday, April 22, following a carry-in luncheon at Grace United Methodist Church.

At that time Golden Age Club members and friends will take an imaginary trip via color film "A Change of Worlds." In the film the spirit of Tecumseh, sister of the great Indian Chief Tecumseh appears to a young college student named Wil. Together, they travel and talk about many of the places she knew in Ohio 200 years ago, and the vast changes that have taken place during those years. Some of the scenes are filmed in Fayette County. The light-hearted story is basically, historically sound. Its Bicentennial theme is that basic human values do not change.

Following the luncheon, Rev. Richard Ward will lead group singing and the Rev. Russell Goodhart will have charge of devotions. Old time music will be by Norman "Rusty" Holloway and Mrs. Gladys Jones. Mrs. Artie Campbell will be at the registration table. Table decorations will be provided by Mrs. Charlotte Timmons and Mrs. Richard Ward, and the meeting will be in charge of the Rev. Paul Niswander program chairman and vice president.

Committee candidates in 3-B

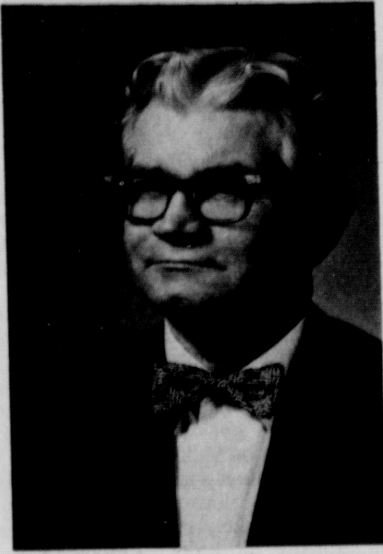

Unopposed candidates for committeemen in the June 8 primary election in Precinct B of the city's third ward are Elmer N. Reed, 619 Fairway Drive, and William G. Ward, 629 Perdue Plaza.

Reed, a Republican, is running for the position of committeeman for the second time. He says that he's always been interested in politics. Reed, a retired industrial engineer from the Armco Steel Corp. Metal Products Division plant in Washington C.H., is a member of the Fayette County Board of Elections and secretary-treasurer of the Fayette County Republican Executive Committee.

Ward, a Democrat, is running for the committee position for the second time. He is employed by

At meeting of county commissioners

Airport improvements studied

The Fayette County Board of Commissioners met with airport operator John Woodmansee Monday to discuss the local air facility.

Woodmansee said that several repairs would be necessary in the near future. He noted cracks in the runways, need for repair of the roadway leading into the airport and remodeling of the office area.

The commissioners said Woodmansee also mentioned possible extension of the runway and office buildings sometime in the future.

Also in connection with the airport, the commissioners considered requests from the Fayette County Pilots Association for permission to erect a permanent memorial to the late Bill Dennis and to rename the facility in his honor.

The commissioners replied by supporting any efforts the pilots association wishes to undertake toward the erection of a memorial. They also asked the association to consider some tribute to others who have been active in the growth of the local airport.

They did not favor a change of the airport name, however. They felt Fayette County Airport was most appropriate for the county-operated facility.

NEW BOOKKEEPING machinery was purchased for the county auditor's office. A National Cash Register Co. electric accounting machine will be ordered at a cost of $12,130. NCR submitted the lower of two bids on the accounting machine.

Only one bid was received for work on the Mount Eber ditch. The commissioners have not yet decided whether to accept the bid or reject it and readvertise.

A meeting between the commissioners and county engineer Charles P. Wagner has been scheduled for 10 a.m. Friday. The group will discuss plans for summer resurfacing and road repair programs.

Kaye F. Bartlett and Robert Lutz, members of the Community Education advisory council, met with the commissioners Monday afternoon to discuss financing of the Community Education program.

Bartlett and Lutz asked the commissioners if they could help support the Community Education program financially, but no immediate action was taken by the board.

Beer strike continues

ST. LOUIS (AP) — The longest strike in the history of Anheuser-Busch, Inc., continued today, keeping 8,000 workers off the job at nine breweries across the country.

After 51 days, however, some cracks appeared in the united front of brewery workers Monday as about 100 members of Brewers and Maltsters Local 6 counterpicketed here at the largest of the firm's breweries Monday.

"We're tired of being out of work," said Emil Nassif, a member of Local 6. "This strike doesn't concern Local 6 at all."

Striking bottlers from other plants closed the St. Louis brewery March 1 and Teamsters Local 1187 representing about 1,500 bottlers here joined the dispute March 25. The St. Louis brewery employees about 4,000 persons.

Police said six persons, one of them wielding a baseball bat were arrested outside the plant Monday as trucks from a local distributor left the plant with beer that was to have been made available to St. Louis retailers today.

Fire doused

A 12:48 p.m. Monday rubbish fire was extinguished by Washington C.H. firemen.

The fire, occurring at a sawdust dump on 808 Lakeview Avenue, was doused with water.

For Community Education program here

Executive committee proposal OK'd

A proposal submitted by Kay F. Bartlett, chairman of the Washington C.H. Area Community Education advisory council, that an executive committee for Community Education be created was approved Monday night by the Washington C.H. Board of Education.

According to Bartlett, the function of the proposed executive committee would be to establish policy for Community Education within and in compliance with the policies of the board of education. A five-member committee will form policies in the areas of program, finance and community relations, as well as in other areas as may be necessary, according to the proposal.

The executive committee will approve recommendations made to the Washington C.H. Board of Education and it will be recognized that the board is not abrogating any of its responsibility or authority in creating the committee.

Bartlett said that the organizational change is consistent with earlier decisions approved by the Community Education advisory council (the initial body asked by the Washington C.H. Board of Education to develop the Community Education proposal), and is being undertaken to improve communications and strengthen the total Community Education program.

The council will continue to function and represent a broad spectrum of community interests in providing director Hank Shaffer with advice on all aspects of the program and potential program activities. Through the executive committee, the advisory council will work with the school board on policy matters.

Appointments to the executive committee will be made by the Board of Education after nomination by Superintendent Edwin M. Nestor from names supplied advisory council chairman. Nominees will be selected from those persons active on the advisory council.

The chairman of the advisory council will be a member of the executive committee and will serve as its chairman. One member of the board of education will serve on the executive committee and the superintendent will be an ex-officer (non-voting) member of the executive committee.

Each member of the executive committee will serve a term of two years. During the first year, two persons will serve terms of one year. Persons may be re-appointed to the executive committee.

Meetings of the executive committee, which will occur monthly or at other times as may be necessary, will be called by the chairman or by a majority of the committee. Summary minutes will be kept of the meetings and will be sent to the superintendent by the chairman.

The Community Education program

director will be responsible to the executive committee in areas of policy and will be responsible to the superintendent and board of education for administrative matters, as well as serving as a recording secretary for the executive committee.

Submission of agenda items to the chairman by the program director for inclusion in meetings of the executive committee and bringing all matters pertaining to Community Education before the executive committee, will be responsibilities of the director.

Boston blacks hit white man, train

BOSTON (AP) — Gangs of black youths in Boston's Roxbury section beat a white man and stopped a long-distance passenger train and stoned its crew in the latest in a series of racial incidents in the city, police said.

Richard Poleit, 31, of Boston was dragged from his car Monday night and was kicked and beaten on the head with bricks by 15 to 20 black youths, officers said. He was on the danger list at a hospital early today, officials said.

About the same time, a gang a mile away stoned trainmen trying to remove old tires and tree limbs piled on the tracks. No passengers or trainmen were injured, an Amtrak spokesman said.

Police reported no arrests in either incident.

Stonings of cars passing through the predominantly black Roxbury section were reported throughout the evening. Police said at least four windshields were smashed.

A white man and woman were treated for head cuts after stones smashed their car windows not far from the intersection where Poleit was beaten.

Police said both gangs apparently came from housing projects near the neighborhoods where the attacks occurred and retreated into the projects when patrol cars appeared.

Saturday, white youths beat two black bus drivers and three white drivers who came to their rescue. And two weeks ago, white antibusing demonstrators beat a black attorney with a pole bearing the American flag and others kicked him in an incident just outside Boston City Hall.

Racial violence has flared sporadically in Boston since a federal district court two years ago ordered school children bused between black and white neighborhoods as part of a school integration plan.

Estonia, officially the Estonian Soviet Socialist Republic, is one of 15 major administrative divisions of the Soviet Union. It covers an area of 17,410 square miles and its population in 1970 was 1,410,000. Its capital and largest city is Tallinn.

Ondrus hiring makes him 26th not 19th grid boss

Pardon me. I made another mistake on the sports page. It wasn't my first, nor will it be my last.

William Bourke, a retired newspaperman now living in Washington C.H., has come forward to reveal my last erroneous statement. Anyway, I think it was my last.

Bourke enlightened me on the number of football coaches employed by Washington Senior High School over the years. In Friday's edition, I mentioned that Paul Ondrus, the newly hired Blue Lion grid boss, would become the 19th grid coach in the school's history.

"Phooey!" Bourke wrote in a letter to me. "If Ondrus gets the nod he will be the 26th coach since football began at WHS in 1902."

Who is to argue with Bourke, the author of a soon to be published book on the history of high school football in Washington C.H. Besides he sent along a list of the coaches I neglected to count.

"The first was Orville P. Cockerill in 1902, '03 and '04," Bourke wrote. "Cockerill teams won 14, lost 6 and tied 1. He was followed by D.L. Thompson in '05 and '06, who won 13, lost 1 and tied 1."

"Herman P. Swinehart held sway in '07 and '08. Next came Fred McElwain in '09, '10 and '11. His best year was in 1920, when WHS won 8 and lost 1. Urban Hidy ruled in 1912 and a fellow named Shively in '13. I can't find anybody who remembers his first name."

"Ruled (Dutch) Schlaabach (he always carried a paddle to practice) in '14, and '15; Chauncey Pley in '16 and '17. Because of WW I, there was no coach in 1918 but Willis (Pete) Willis, a senior stalwart directed the team to a two victory, one-defeat year."

"Charles Morehead came in 1919. He was young, barely older than five war vets on his squad. Anyone who ever saw the team of 1919 will argue that it was the greatest ever. It won eight, was undefeated and untied. Morehead continued with Tom Rogers as captain in 1920. That team lost its seventh game at Circleville, 12-6, a disaster attributed to partisan officials."

"After winning 18 of 19, Morehead's third year, 1921, was plain disaster: nine losses and one tie. Warren W. Vannorsdall was in his second year when your saga begins in 1923."

Bourke's letter ended with "I hope this billet doux will deepen your perspective."

That it did Mr. Bourke, I got my information from a list of coaches that is run each fall in the Record-Herald's football edition. The list dates back to 1923 and I merely added the previous season's coach and team record each year. Thanks to Bourke, I will be adding names to the bottom of the list this September.

Incidentally, Bourke's book, "WHS Football—A 75-Year Retrospective," is in its first pains of childbirth. Publication is expected in mid-June.

The information Bourke sent in his letter was from his "Roll of Coaches." He also lists the paid assistant coaches and faculty managers. He also has a section called "The Long Blue Line" containing 1,250 names of persons who contributed to Washington C.H. football while students. Even five girl statisticians are named along with team stars and waterboys.

Bourke still needs pictures of teams from 1930 through 1965 to complete the book which is sponsored by the Washington Senior High School Athletic Department and the Football Boosters Club. It is a Bicentennial project endorsed by the Fayette County Bicentennial Committee and the Fayette County Historical Society.

The Huntington Bank is handling the pre-publication sale at $7.50 per copy. The price after publication will be $10.

I suppose I ought to have one.

Panther reserves sweep

Two excellent pitching performances by Shawn Riley and Don Eyre gave the Miami Trace reserve baseball team a sweep of a Saturday twinbill with Westfall.

Riley kept his earned run average at 0.00 for 21 innings tossing a four-hitter in the first game. Riley struck out nine

Westfall batters in the 6-1 win. The Westfall run was unearned.

Don Eyre followed Riley's performance with a one-hitter in the second game as the Panthers posted a 4-0 win.

Coach Jeff Parker said it was by far Eyre's best performance of the season. He had excellent control on his way to a 13-strikeout game.

In the hitting department, Dave Hennessy had three singles in the first game and Ben Stockwell went three for three in the second with a double and three RBI's.

The two wins upped the Panther reserves' record to 5-3. They will return to action this Saturday with a home doubleheader against Circleville.

Ohio State captures Muirfield golf title

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Ohio State has captured the first annual Muirfield Invitational Collegiate Golf Tournament by five strokes, but an Ohio Wesleyan senior won individual medalist honors.

Jim Ryan shot a two under par 74 Monday, edging OSU's Ralph Guarasci with a 75 for individual honors.

Pete Rose has doubts of breaking Joltin' Joe's mark

CINCINNATI (AP) — Pete Rose was only a couple of months old when Joe DiMaggio set a major league baseball record in 1941 with his hitting streak of 56 consecutive games.

DiMaggio's streak is still a record and is being mentioned more than ever around the Cincinnati Reds' clubhouse where Rose currently has a 22 game hitting streak going.

But, with all due respects, the bulldog-tough third baseman doubts that DiMaggio's streak can be duplicated in the current area of specialization.

"It's so hard to get any lengthy streak going because of today's relief pitching," said Rose, who is hitting .514 after eight games, thanks to a searing 18-for-35 start.

Hitting is Rose's grand obsession, but the 35-year-old veteran has not gotten overly excited about his streak.

"You don't want to start thinking about that," he said. "I just swing and hope. You've got to be super lucky. You've got to be lucky just to hit .300."

Rose has been lucky for ten of his years in the majors and ten days ago, he moved past Lou Brock of St. Louis as the all-time hit leader among active

National League players. Rose has 2,565 hits during his 14-year career, 49th on the alltime list.

Hot streaks are nothing new for Rose, who is five games away from tying the Reds' all-time mark of 27, jointly held by Edd Roush and Vada Pinson. Roush did it twice, in 1920 and 1924, and Pinson equalled it in 1965.

"Another time I hit safely in 39 of 40 games. I hit .400 during that two-month stretch," Rose recalled.

DiMaggio had a .408 batting average and 55 runs batted in during his 1941 batting binge which began on May 15 and July 17.

"That's got to be baseball's greatest record because of the consistency involved," Rose said.

Rose said he's not even thinking about the 14 in a row from last season.

"You can't let that stuff start working on you," he said. "Actually I've hit safely in 31 of the last 32 games. I should have a 32-game string going."

"I've never hit the ball harder than in the first game of the World Series, yet I didn't get a hit."

Rose was held hitless in the opener by Boston Red Sox pitcher Luis Tiant, but ended up as the top hitter in the series with a .370 average.

Trace breezes to dual track victory

Miami Trace won eight of ten running events to hand Logan an 84 1-6 to 42 5-6 loss in a dual track meet on the Panthers' oval Monday.

The Panthers had three double winners in their sixth dual meet of the season. It was their fourth win.

Dan Gifford again dominated the jumping events with his usual first in the high jump and a first in the long jump. Greg Cobb took the sprints with wins in the 100-yard and 220-yard dash. Bill Hanners remained undefeated in both the mile and the half-mile run since he started doubling in the events earlier this season.

Gifford cleared 6'2" in the high jump and he was again backed up superbly by Art Schlichter, who took second with a 6'0" leap. Gifford picked up five more points in the long jump and Garry Conn gave the Panthers a point with a third place finish in the event.

Logan won the other three field events, but the Panthers continued to pick up points with Ralph Fast returning to earlier form to take second in both the discus and the shot. Jon Sagar added a point with a third in the discus.

The duo of Rod Garringer and Randy Hinkley placed two, three in the pole vault to round out the Panthers' field events scoring.

Scott Gerber and Brad Smith opened the running events with a one, two finish in the high hurdles, and Cobb followed with a first in the 100-yard dash. Cobb was followed by a three-way tie for second in the race. Teammates Lonnie Hixon and Brian Zurfache along with a Logan runner sprinted the distance in :11.1. It was the first of three ties which accounted for the odd point totals.

Miami Trace swept the mile run with Hanners winning in 4:39.5, exactly two seconds off the school record. Terry Rodgers followed with a second place finish coming back strong after sitting out a week due to illness.

Logan broke up the Miami Trace dominance of the running events with successive wins in the half-mile relay and the 440 run. In the quarter mile Dave Ritenour and Schlichter picked up points with second and third finishes.

The Panthers got back on the right track with a sweep of the low hurdles.

Mets win 17-inning contest

AP Sports Writer

With one wave of his wand, Del Unser made a baseball disappear and at the same time changed himself from a goat into a hero.

A misplay by the New York centerfielder allowed two St. Louis runs in the first inning, but he made up for it in the 17th with a home run that provided the Mets with a 4-3 victory Monday night.

"When you get into extra innings, there's no sense fooling around," said Unser, who pulverized a Mike Wallace fastball with two out to break up a marathon four-hour, 46-minute game. The shot heard 'round Busch Stadium settled a dramatic battle which had been tied by the Cardinals in the seventh inning, some two hours before.

Unser went up to the plate with one thing in mind: "I was just thinking of swinging at the ball and swinging hard."

Wallace said later he was just thinking of one thing, too: Throwing a fastball on the first pitch to get ahead.

"He's the type of guy that wanted to get ahead," said Unser, who once played with Wallace on the Philadelphia Phillies. "If he had, he's got a good fork ball, and a good curve and he would have been tough to hit."

Extra-inning games are old hat between the Cardinals and Mets. Two years ago, they played a seven-hour, 25-inning affair at Shea Stadium, the longest night game in baseball history.

In the other National League games, the Houston Astros beat the Los Angeles Dodgers 8-3 and the Montreal Expos downed the Chicago Cubs 4-3. In the American League, the California Angels belted the Baltimore Orioles 9-4; the Oakland A's tripped the Detroit Tigers 6-5 in 10 innings and the Boston Red Sox blanked the Minnesota Twins 2-0.

Unser's hit was his first in eight at-bats and the only extra-base blow among 18 Mets hits off Wallace and five other Cardinal pitchers. Aided by a St. Louis error, New York wiped out a 2-0 St. Louis lead with a three-run burst in the second inning and protected that slim edge until Vic Harris and pinch-hitter Ron Fairly rifled doubles for the Cards off New York ace Tom Seaver.

Seaver then departed in the eighth, giving way to Skip Lockwood, who was followed to the mound by Ken Sanders and Bob Apodaca, 1-0, the winner.

Astros 8, Dodgers 3

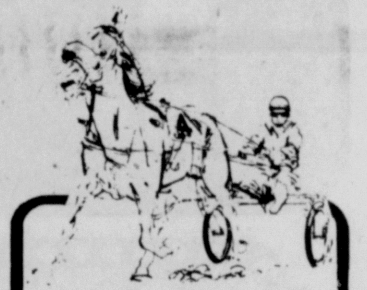

Jose Cruz belted a three-run triple to key a four-run first inning and trigger Houston past Los Angeles. Cruz' hit climaxed the Astros' big first inning and provided them with their eventual winning run.

The victory boosted Houston into an unaccustomed position — first place in the NL West.

Expos 4, Cubs 3
Pete Mackanin's two-run homer in the fourth inning and Mike Jorgensen's RBI double in the seventh carried Montreal past Chicago. Mackanin's belt, following a walk to Tim Foli, was the 13th of his career but ironically only the first with a man on base.

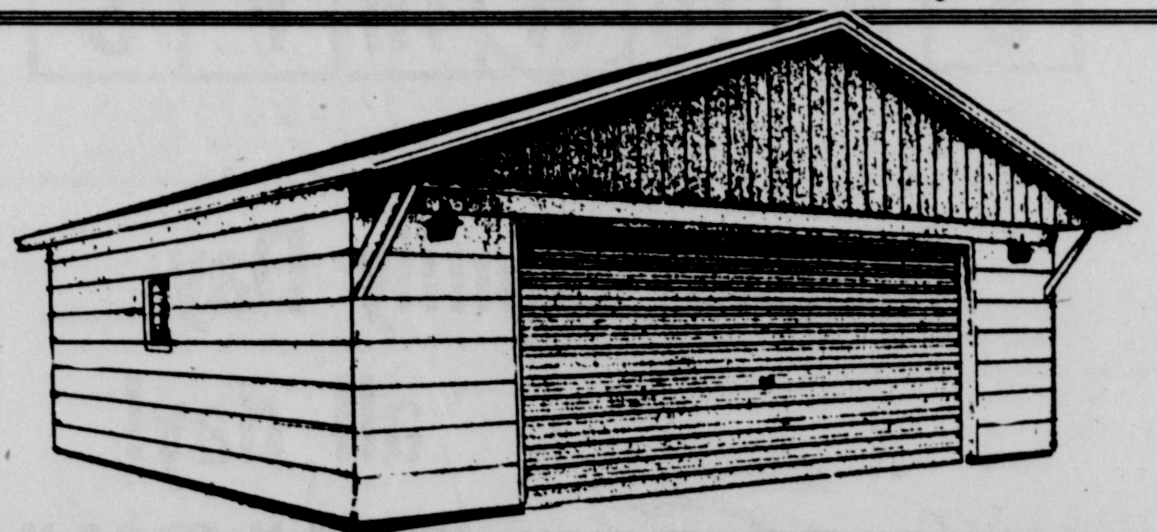

Angels 9, Orioles 4
Bobby Bonds made his debut with California by drilling three singles and stealing a base and the Angels erupted with a 13-hit attack to rout Baltimore in a game marred by a beanball war. The trouble erupted in the eighth inning when Mark Belanger of Baltimore was sent sprawling in the dirt by Angels starter and winner Frank Tanana.

TV Viewing

By JAY SHARBUTT
AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — News specials

usually don't draw big ratings, but the season's ratings race is over. This may be why viewers are being offered not one but three prime-time news specials tonight.

Two are on CBS, "Mr. Rooney Goes to Dinner" at 8 p.m. EST and "Inside Public Television" at 10 p.m. The latter show is competing with an ABC News special called "Gun Control: Pro And Con."

Further complicating viewer choices is the fact that the Public Broadcast Service has chosen tonight to feed public TV stations a brilliant film documentary, "Antonia: Portrait of the Woman."

That show, by film maker Jill Godmillow and singer Judy Collins, is a warm, exceptionally interesting profile of conductor Antonia Brico, one of the first women to lead a major symphony orchestra.

Give this show a look if you've time. Or find out when your station will rerun it this week if tonight's showing conflicts with reporter-writer Andy Rooney's CBS study of eats and dining out in America.

You've got to watch "Mr. Rooney Goes to Dinner." It's kind of a burpee's catalogue of woe and hope, done in the gentle, whimsical, yet solidly reported style of his "Rooney Goes to Washington" show of 1975.

His "Dinner" hour is most thorough, studying not only eating places but also wine lists, advertising and menus. There's even a valuable warning against dining at joints featuring "home cooking."

One of the funniest moments — and it'll be most satisfying for all victims of long waits for unsatisfying meals — comes when Rooney brings the CBS camera to watch him lunch at a famous New Orleans restaurant.

For some reason, perhaps the camera, he gets superb service. We soon learn the service wasn't so hot the previous night, when Rooney, two pals and no camera, ate at the place, disguised as ordinary tourists.

We won't reveal what ensued when Rooney discussed this with the waiter — you'll have to watch to fully appreciate the moment — but suffice it to say a mighty blow is struck for all long-suffering diners.

Of the competing ABC and CBS news specials later tonight, we'd have to give the nod to ABC's gun show, half of which is devoted to folks advocating stronger legislation to control handgun ownership.

The second half hears from pro-gun forces who, as the show notes, argue that "the need is not for gun control; it is for better crime control."

This half-and-half technique seems quite effective. It focuses the issues more sharply than the usual news special method of seven-second claims immediately followed by seven-second rebuttals.

In Roman numerals the letter C represents 100.

Hookers harried by policewoman

JOLIET, Ill. (AP) — J.J. is a seductive-looking policewoman who sauntered through a prostitute-ridden parking lot, waiting to get propositioned, police here say. So far, she has been in on 86 arrests.

"It's a ghost town out there now," said Police Sgt. Dale Vollmer. "The prostitutes are packing up and leaving town. They just don't have the customers anymore."

Vollmer estimated that 38 hookers worked the parking area of an all-night restaurant and motel complex, charging from $20 to $50 for their services.

"They were doing $1 million a year in business," said Vollmer. "Customers were coming from all parts of the country. Quite a few of them were truckers turning off nearby Interstate 80. The news of the hooker hotbed spread by word of mouth and CB radio and we couldn't stop it."

"When we arrested the prostitutes they'd pay their bail and be back in half an hour," Vollmer continued. "We tried sitting on the street shooting off a flash camera every time a girl went up to a car, but that didn't bother anybody. Our big hope was to get the men so scared they wouldn't come back."

That was when J.J. became a decoy. Dressed in a black wig, a leather coat and blue jeans, and with a snub-nosed .38 in her ankle holster, the policewoman huddled over coffee in the cafe along with the other professionals waiting for clients.

Vollmer said J.J., who has a black belt in karate, also hung around outside, where as many as 1,200 cars on Friday and Saturday nights would cruise around the lot, tooting horns for business.

"J.J. would be propositioned. She would tell her clients to meet her in a room at the motel at a certain time. When they showed up with her, detectives were there to make the arrest," said Vollmer. "She was in on 86 of the 100 arrests we made. Things really started quieting down when the local newspaper began printing the names of those charged," he said.

Vollmer said 42 of those arrested pleaded guilty of soliciting for prostitution and paid $100 fines. Some jumped bond and the cases of others are still backlogged in court.

J.J. says she was a little nervous at her first arrest, "but from then on it was a breeze. Cars of men kept coming along like a merry-go-round. As long as you're female and breathing they'll come to you."

"It would begin with a 'Hey Baby' then, 10 minutes or so later the man would be under arrest," said J.J.

"There isn't a type we didn't get — barbers, lawyers, executives, truck driver, hippies, farm boys. 'Some of them would just break down and cry, or try to talk their way out by saying they just were trying to learn the facts of life,'" she said.

But, J.J. added, "We didn't take a single man I felt bad about. The money they are paying goes for the girl's heroin habit. So it ends up in the pusher's pocket who ends up on the

JAPANESE PRINTS—A visitor takes a close look at the exhibition of Kiyoshi Saito's works at a Tokyo gallery. While the art print market in

Japan has long been patronized by the foreign community, now print shops report the Japanese are becoming increasingly interested in their own art.

Art Print Market Prospers in Japan

By KATHRYN TOLBERT
TOKYO (AP) — The American woman showed the dinner guests around her Tokyo home and proudly pointed out the framed art works hanging on every wall.

"This is our Maki. This one over here is our Sekino, and over there is our Saito. That one up there is Kawada," she said, calling the Japanese prints by the names of the artists.

The guests nodded in recognition. The print market in Japan long has been patronized by the foreign community, and the modern print business got its start with the interest of American occupation forces after World War II. It has been growing steadily since.

An association of foreign women in Japan has been holding print shows of works by living artists annually for the past 20 years. This year they sold 796 prints in three days for a total of more than $U.S. 49,000. The money, after the artists receive 50 per cent, is used for a scholarship fund.

While foreigners made up 90 per cent of the buyers for Japanese graphic art 20 years ago, today print shops report the Japanese have become increasingly interested in their own art and now are 50 to 60 per cent of the customers.

Yuji Abe, owner of the Yoseido Print Gallery and Store on one of the Ginza's side streets, attributed this to a change in education. He said that after World War II printmaking was taught in Japanese schools for the first time, something he considered remarkable in view of Japan's long history of graphics.

"Oil painting and water color painting have a more Western feeling and most teachers of this are influenced by Europe. But prints are Japanese. That's why they finally started teaching printmaking and the history of prints," he said.

Tadasu Watanabe, proprietor of one of Tokyo's oldest print shops — the Watanabe Store was opened by his father in 1906 — said that the Japanese, in their postwar affluence, have taken an interest in interior decorating and are spending money more freely. Foreigners, on the other hand, have faced a worsening exchange rate, making the prints cost more for them.

Price of prints starts at around $U.S. 16. Most fall in the $33 to $66 range, but well known artists such as Kiyoshi Saito regularly get $165 and more for one print.

Watanabe discounted investment as a reason for buying.

"Before the oil shock about three years ago, maybe there was a great feeling for buying for investment," he said. "But now there is none of that feeling. Only those who really like the art buy it. That makes us very happy — to have earnest customers. To buy for investment is a mistake. They should trust their eyes."

As the print market prospers, more artists have become able to support themselves by the sale of their prints, although it is still difficult for all but the established names to make a comfortable living that way.

Remember Anastasia? You may have seen the Ingrid Bergman movie this past weekend, and I'm sure you've read much of the interesting fiction that has been written about the Grand Duchess who was murdered (we were told she was murdered) in Ekaterinburg in 1918 (we were told it was Ekaterinburg in 1918). We are told that the Tsar and his entire family were brutally murdered, but since no bodies were found, you can just figure how many interesting theories and stories were soon circulating about what happened.

As is often the case, however, none of the theories or stories can hold a candle to the true account for excitement, drama, and intrigue. Yes, in truth the Tsar and his family did escape, and the story of that escape is indeed fantastic. No fiction writer could have dreamed up anything like this true account. As for Grand Duchess Anastasia, yes, she was murdered, but not in Ekaterinburg in 1918. She was murdered in Chicago in 1968. And Anastasia's brother, Aleksei, Tsarevich of all the Russians is alive.

Yes, this is the most interesting story we've latched onto in a long time. The entire story is in a little reprint pamphlet titled, THE TSAR'S BEST AGENT. The author is Alan Stang. Want more info on the subject? The Tsarevich publishes a monthly bulletin called DOUBLE EAGLE, and a subscription costs $24 a year. It is available from H.I.H. AIRPORT NEWS

By SANDY WOODMANSEE
Just a reminder to all you pilots that the biennial flight review will be upcoming in June. See John for more information. The Fayette County Pilot's Association will hold a fly-in planning meeting at the airport on April 22, 1976 at 7:30 p.m. Coffee and refreshments will be served. Anyone wishing to help is welcome.

All veterans should be aware of a bill which is presently under discussion in the Veterans Affairs Committee that will do away with the G.I. bill for flight training and correspondence courses. I will keep you posted on developments.

Some of the incoming aircraft have been K-D Tool's Aerostar, Thomas Industries' twin Beech, a National Guard helicopter stopped in several times, Don and Pat Fairbanks stopped in from Cardinal Aviation in Cincinnati in their helicopter. Pat was at the controls after an absence of about five months, she said. Many other aircraft have stopped in for fuel or just a visit.

If any of you subscribe to the Flying Magazine, you may have noticed a book review entitled, "The World's Worst Aircraft". One mentioned was the Maxim Gorki (that was really its name, no kidding). It had a wingspan bigger than a Boeing 747, set size records as it lugged a movie house in the fuselage, a printing press in one wing, and a photo darkroom in another. And it actually flew - for a while anyway - on eight engines. Sounds like a fun book to read and is by author James Gilbert, published by St. Martin's Press.

Local pilots flying have been Bob Lundquist, Don Simonton, Joe Kingery, Dick Curtis, Louis Poole, Larry East, Ron Ballard, Doug Smith, Steve Gilliland, George Teets, Pat Piper, Bob

Wilson, Kevin Mallow, Mark Merritt, Ron Doucette, Dick Holder, Millard French, Bob Meenach, Jack Patton (nice to have you back again, Jack) and Wally Coster.

Don't forget the April 25 fly-over to Hagerstown, Ind. for dinner. Contact Norman Merritt for information and if you have an aircraft with room for passengers, be sure to let him know.

Six non-traffic cases heard in local court

A Xenia man, ordered to stay out of Washington C.H. for six months, and three bad check verdicts were among the results of Monday's Washington C.H. Municipal Court session.

Clarence E. Deer, 63, of Xenia, was fined $100 with a credit of $30 for time served in jail for disorderly conduct. Judge Robert L. Simpson ordered Deer to leave Washington C.H. immediately and stay away for six months.

Deer's conviction stemmed from a recent incident at the Stop 35 restaurant at the intersection of U.S. 35 and I-71 in which he created a disturbance.

Charles E. Ward, 51, of Greenfield, was fined $100 and sentenced to 90 days in jail with all the time suspended, for passing a $41.04 bad check at the Kroger Co. store Clinton Avenue, on Jan. 21. He was also placed on probation for one year.

A Mount Sterling woman, Mildred

Walters, 38, was fined $100 with all the amount suspended and sentenced to 30 days in jail with all the time suspended provided she make restitution for a $128.23 bad check passed at Kroger's on Feb. 1.

Rhonda Lingo, 21, of Williamsport, was fined $75 and sentenced to 30 days in jail with all the time suspended for passing a bad $55.81 check at Kroger's on Dec. 22, 1975.

A $100 bond was forfeited when William H. Thompson, 56, of Room 18, Washington Inn Hotel, failed to appear in court to face a disorderly conduct by intoxication charge.

Jim Minney, 25, of 1013 Dayton Ave., was ordered to pay costs of damaged property, and pending this fulfillment, a charge of destruction of property was dismissed.

A charge against Chris Noes, 19, of 625 Vine St., of assault was dropped by the prosecuting witness.

Fighting continues in Lebanon

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — The new truce supervision committee said today that Palestinian troops would form a buffer force between Beirut's warring Moslem and Christian street fighters, but meanwhile the fighting raged without letup.

Police said about 100 persons were killed and 160 wounded by mortar and rocket fire during the night. One of those killed was the 16-year-old grandson of Pierre Gemayel, whose rightwing Phalange party has the largest Christian militia in the year-old civil war.

Police also reported that more than 150 persons were kidnapped but that most were released after a short time.

A new cease-fire, agreed to under Syrian pressure during the weekend, was to have gone into effect at midnight Monday. But the deadline made no difference in the fighting in the capital and nearby mountain towns.

Decisions made by the leaders were not transformed into orders to the hodgepodge of street armies, reflecting the leaders' tenuous control over their forces and their distrust of each other.

As leftist Moslem and Palestinians leaders met Monday night to discuss ways of enforcing the cease-fire, leftist gunmen were attacking Phalangist positions in the Beirut port area.

Similarly, long after Gemayel subscribed to the truce, Christian gunmen were firing mortar and artillery shells into Moslem positions in the charred downtown hotel district and nearby commercial streets.

Suit names auto dealer

TOLEDO, Ohio (AP) — Atty. Gen. William J. Brown has charged an automobile dealer here with failing to provide proper service on auto repair work.

In a suit filed Monday in Lucas County Common Pleas Court, Brown accused Brondes Motor Sales of charging customers for unnecessary and unauthorized and sometimes

"shoddy" repairs. The dealership was also alleged to have charged for work that was not done.

Brown asked for a permanent injunction against further violations of the state consumer law. He also asked the court to order Brondes to establish a compliance program with an escrow fund to pay for reviews of the operation by his office.

Energy conservation given fresh impetus

WASHINGTON (AP) — In a policy reversal, the Ford administration is raising fuel conservation to equal status with developing new sources of energy in the effort to reduce U.S. dependence on foreign suppliers.

The Energy Research and Development Administration included the increased emphasis on conservation in an updated plan for energy research submitted to Congress on Monday.

The updated report estimated that conservation could save the nation at least one-third of today's oil consumption by 1985.

ERDA Administrator Robert C. Seamans Jr. said the update "reflects widespread public reaction to the initial plan," which last June downgraded conservation in favor of developing new energy sources.

The administration said then that significant fuel savings would require mandatory conservation measures that Congress would not pass.

However, early this month the government reported a steady drop in energy consumption since 1973 due, at least in part, to conservation.

Seamans said, in outlining the new plan, that his agency has not worked out details of an aggressive conservation program. But he said it will include development of better ways to insulate homes and buildings, and elimination of pilot lights for gas stoves and heaters.

The report said conservation is much less expensive than production and can be effected more rapidly.

"It typically costs less to save a barrel of oil than to produce one through the development of new technology," the report said. "Energy conservation generally has a more beneficial effect on the environment than does energy produced and used."

Seamans said, "I believe it impossible to exaggerate the need to make more efficient use of energy."

Each barrel saved means one not imported."

ERDA's new plan estimated that improving the efficiency of energy use could bring savings of 5.3 million to 7.3 million barrels of oil per day by 1985, an equivalent of one-third to one-half the nation's present total oil consumption.

Seamans said his agency will try to improve energy efficiency in factories, buildings and transportation, and in the generation of electricity, where much of the energy waste takes place.

In guidance, physical education

City board approves elementary programs

By GEORGE MALEK

Two long-awaited elementary programs will commence this fall.

The Washington C.H. Board of Education Monday night approved the employment of an elementary guidance counselor and an elementary physical education coordinator.

Elementary programs of guidance and physical education were named as top priorities for 1976-77 during a special board meeting last winter.

The third high priority item established at the meeting, an upgraded reading program for elementary grades, was approved earlier. The board made appropriations of some $7,000 for improved reading materials for grades one through three.

The board approved employment of former Blue Lion star quarterback Steve Ross as elementary physical education coordinator. A senior at Ashland College, Ross stressed the importance of elementary programs when interviewed. He was particularly interested in movement rather than competitive sport at the elementary level.

Donald J. Moore, an American history teacher at Washington Senior High School, was approved as elementary guidance counselor. A teacher in the system for the past 20 years, Moore has a master of arts degree in guidance and is certified as a counselor by the state.

In addition, the board approved the selection of Paul Ondrus as head football coach. An assistant coach at Bowling Green State University, Ondrus was selected from some 50 applicants for the post.

He is currently completing requirements for a masters degree in social studies. In making his recommendation to the board of education, superintendent Edwin M. Nestor stressed Ondrus' ability in the classroom as one of his major assets. Nestor noted that a football coach spends 75 per cent of his time in academics.

Nearly all of the Washington C.H. School District faculty and staff have been rehired for the coming school year.

Issuing of contracts was approved for all but two of the city's teachers and non-certified employees.

Nestor said he deeply regretted having to recommend non-renewal of two contracts in the language department. He stressed that declining enrollment, not teaching ability, had forced the terminations of employment.

The positions held by Miss Pamela Heiney, Spanish teacher, and Miss Charlene Laslie, French teacher, were not renewed. Nestor said declining enrollment in these languages would require that the board find one person to teach both languages.

He noted that while most teachers have an average of about 160 pupils per day, the combined enrollment to 1976-77 in these two classes combined was less than 140. In the interest of efficiency, one teacher certified in both languages must be hired to replace them, he said.

Nestor added that it is not unusual to find teachers qualified to teach both languages and by hiring such a person, the system would save more than $10,000.

He stressed that both teachers had done an excellent job in the classroom, and they would receive the highest recommendations for employment elsewhere.

Six other employees submitted their resignations. They were Miss Sharon Shuller, second grade teacher at Eastside Elementary School; David Young, high school English; Mrs. Carol Wood, secretary at Belle Aire Elementary School; Mrs. Myrtle Troute, lunchroom employee; Dwight Garrett, high school social studies and physical education; and Miss Susan Bailey, high school business teacher.

Due to declining enrollment, the latter two positions will not be filled.

FINAL PLANS for the sixth grade field trip were approved Monday. The entire sixth grade class at the Middle School will participate in a two-day nature study trip at Butler Springs Christian Assembly camp May 17 and 18.

There will be some 15 different areas of study available, and each student is being asked to choose 10 courses. The class will then be divided into groups of 20 students. Each group will investigate one of the 15 areas for approximately one hour.

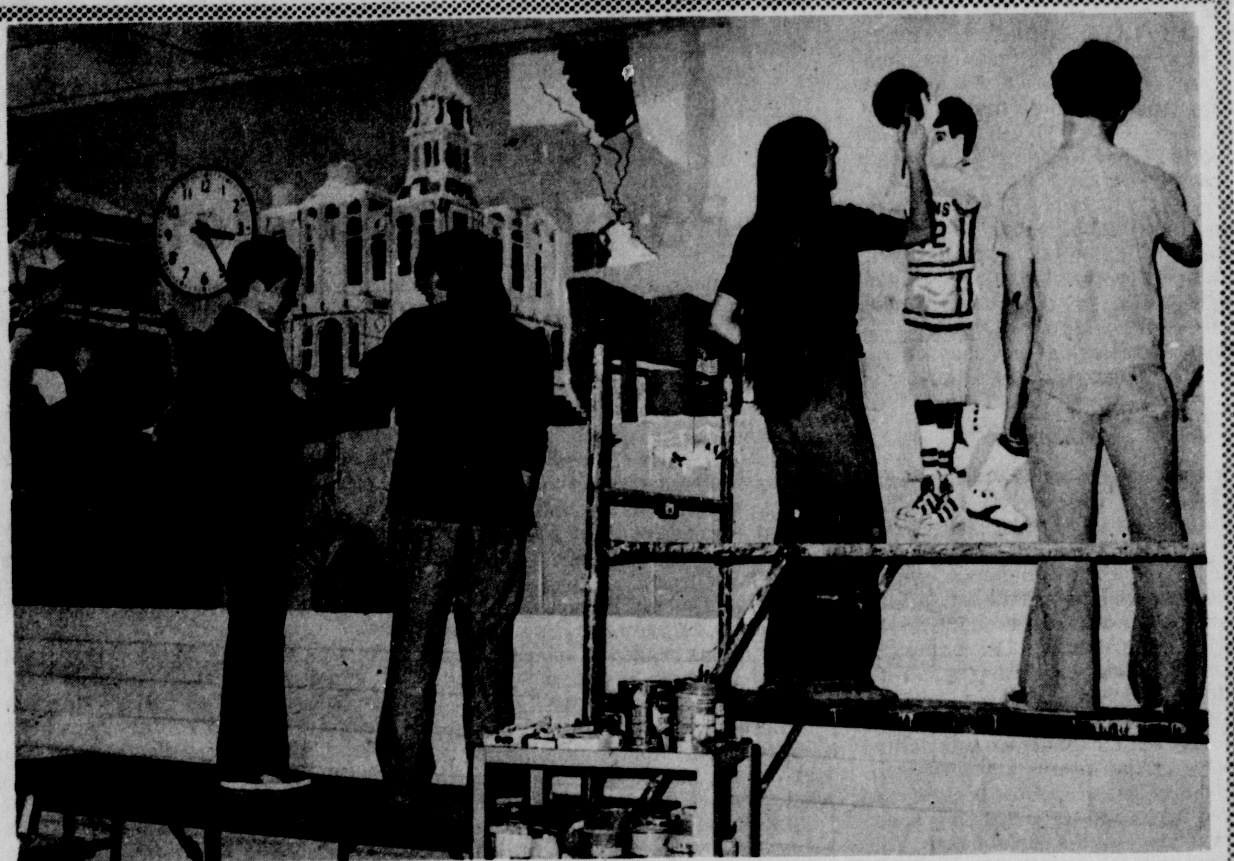

The sixth grade students, sixth grade teachers, 17 senior high school students, and several other resource people will participate. They will leave Washington C.H. at 9:30 a.m. Monday, May 17, and return approximately 6 p.m. the following day.

Areas of study will include geology, ornithology, map reading, pioneer living, wild flowers, tree identification, wildlife, ecology, conservation, first aid, creative writing, nature craft, water life, and nature hikes.

Dismissal from classes for sixth grade teachers at 1 p.m. April 26 was also approved. This will allow the teachers to visit the camp in the afternoon prior to the trip to prepare their instructional sessions.

Several other field trips were approved by the board. Title I students in the first grade will visit the Cincinnati Zoo May 11. Title I third grade students will visit Carillon Park at the National Cash Register Co. in Dayton May 20, safety patrol members will travel to Kings Island May 8, fifth graders at

HISTORICAL MURAL — Students at Washington Senior High School are painting a large mural on the school cafeteria wall as their contribution to the nation's 200th birthday celebration. The mural is presently 75 per cent complete and is expected to be finished in late May.

With mural on cafeteria wall

WSHS pupils trace area history

In an effort to do their part for the nation's bicentennial celebration, students at Washington Senior High School are drawing a historical mural on the main wall of the school cafeteria.

Donald J. Moore, American History teacher at the school, and Christopher Waldrup, art teacher, are in charge of the project.

One of Moore's history classes was discussing what Washington C.H. could do to honor the bicentennial, and more importantly, what they could do themselves. It was out of this discussion that the idea for the mural was born. The suggestion greatly appealed to Moore, who conveyed the thought to Waldrup for confirmation.

The two teachers had a number of meetings before the project got underway. There were color schemes to be discussed, scenes to be decided upon, and financial snags to be worked out. Finally, with the help of some drawings by the famed 1930's regionalist Thomas Hart Benton, the style of the mural was brought to life. Moore and Waldrup found that a "continual evolution" of the scenery, where one scene simply flows into another, would be the most appropriate manner in which to draw the mural.

The plan was then put into action. Tina Russell, a Washington Senior High School senior, sketched the original drawing of the mural on a large sheet of paper, which was later used to make assignments for the other workers. The mural, which attempts to represent the ethnic background of all Washington C.H. residents shows progressively the "old versus new" aspects not only of the community, but education as well.

Beginning on the far left-hand side of the cafeteria wall, the

"old" aspects are shown. The mural begins with an American Indian looking over the Fayette County landscape at the coming of the settlers and the establishment of Washington C.H. Early Washington C.H. is exemplified in the drawing of an 1867 map, which shows the facades of homes, churches and schools in the first days of the town. The mural then moves on to show the development of transportation in the county, from the Conestoga wagon through the first railroad train to a 1920 model truck.

Next is a view of Court Street as it looked in Howe's "History of Ohio" in 1846. This view includes the second Court House, the tornado of 1885, a replica of the old covered bridge once found on Court Street and the facades of several store fronts. Following the Court Street view is an agricultural scene depicting a farmer with a plow. Around the farm is an authentic replica of a seven-rail fence. Near this scene, Moore and Waldrup hope to include a copy of the "gopher ditcher," which was used to drain Fayette County fields before the tile method.

Ending the older aspects of the mural is a scene which stresses early education. The drawing is of what was at that time deluxe one-room school house. Modeled after the old school in Jasper, it is thought to be deluxe because of its four windows and the bell tower.

Between the old and the new is a view of the south face of the former Central School on Temple Street. This is where the Middle School is now located. A class scene from around the time of World War I is pictured.

The newer aspects begin with a scene depicting four soldiers from the Korean War, World War I, World War II and the Spanish-American War. Immediately to the right of the soldiers is a map of Fayette County which is divided into towns and creeks. Progress in education is shown next in a drawing of Washington Senior High School. Standing by the high school is a football player, a basketball player and a girl's volleyball player. The new aspects are ended with a view of two high school graduates who seem to be gazing back into history, just as the Indian at the beginning of the mural was looking into the future.

The mural, which is financed by a small allotment from the school's general fund, is drawn as authentically and as realistically as possible. To make sure the scenes were correctly depicted, they were checked with an 1875 Fayette County atlas, several old yearbooks (particularly the 1926 edition) and many photographs. It was not easy compiling the scenes for the mural, and students have changed ideas and added things from time to time. The student artists have had to draw and redraw, and as both Moore and Waldrup commented, "It's not been easy." Still, as they look at the progress they have made, they can see it is a feat of which to be proud of. The mural is about 75 per cent complete, and will hopefully be finished in late May.

Although the project is open to all classes at Washington Senior High School, Sandy Harris, Sue and Tammy Pope, Jack Stump, Becky Tolle, Dick Welch, Bryan Connell, Keith Wightman, Kathy Lehman and Mark Heiny have done most of the work.

On May 8, which is "History Day" at Ohio Dominican College, Moore and Waldrup hope to compile color slides or prints and a commentary on the mural to exhibit.

Ceremonies to be held May 9

Hospital project dedication set

Dedication of new facilities at Fayette County Memorial Hospital has been scheduled for the first day of "Hospital Week," May 9-15.

In recent months, the hospital has added a new wing of patient rooms, expanded the emergency room, increased the laboratory facilities, extended the pharmacy and revamped the medical record keeping section. Dedication ceremonies will be held at 1:30 p.m. May 9.

Tours of the new facilities will be arranged immediately following the dedication. Tours will be scheduled until approximately 3:30 p.m.

The new facilities will be dedicated in the name of the late Wilbur Welton who donated the funds used in the renovation project.

Several other matters were discussed Monday night at a hospital board of trustees meeting.

The board approved the purchase of a new blood testing machine at a cost of $6,400. The old machine which counts blood cells has deteriorated and is in need of replacement.

Diagnostic equipment for stress on heart muscles will be installed at the hospital. The board authorized Dr. M.A. Jan, a cardiologist from London, to establish the stress testing center which can give early warning of probable heart attack in individuals. In addition, the board approved remodeling of two patient-care rooms for use as physical therapy centers.

Administrator Robert L. Kunz announced a new smoking policy to be enacted at the hospital. He said whenever possible, smoking patients will be assigned rooms separate from non-smokers. He added that smoking by hospital personnel will be restricted to specific smoking areas.

Through a bequest from the Edith J. Kennedy estate, the hospital will purchase three new cribs for the pediatric wing. The estimated cost of the units is $500 each. Mrs. Kennedy contributed $5,000 to be used to upgrade pediatric care.

The board authorized Kunz to dispose of obsolete equipment at the hospital. Kunz said this will be done in the near future either at auction or by sealed bids.

It was noted that total bed capacity of the hospital now stands at 101 beds.

STATISTICAL reports for March showed 349 admissions totaling 2,229 inpatient days. There was an average of 71.90 persons in the hospital each day. This represented 82.46 per cent occupancy of the hospital and 92.57 per cent occupancy in the medical and surgical division.

The average length of stay in the hospital was 6.08 days, with an average of 6.97 days in the medical and surgical division.

There were 1,503 x-rays taken, 6,883 laboratory tests performed, 530 physical therapy treatments administered, and 410 inhalation treatments.

Major surgeries numbered 79, minor surgeries 78, and 1,483 persons were treated in the emergency room. Thus far in 1976, the number of emergency room treatments is eight per cent higher than during the same period last year.

The actual hospital revenue per patient day has been $112.24; the budget estimated $113.36, and the national average is $157.50, Kunz said. Actual expenses have averaged $114; the budget called for $119.83, and the national average is $146.

Total expense per admission has been $713.68; the budget estimated $749.59, and the national average is $1,327.

Freedom of press arguments heard

WASHINGTON (AP) — "What is the difference between everybody else in the courtroom going out and talking about what happened in the hearing and the press reporting it?" asked Justice Thurgood Marshall.

"The difference," replied Nebraska assistant Atty. Gen. Harold Mosher, "is one of degree."

The exchange was one of dozens between the nine members of the Supreme Court and four lawyers who argued before them Monday on the power of judges to restrict news coverage of criminal cases.

The court is expected to decide the question within a few weeks.

Before the court is a judge's order that prevented newsmen from reporting most of the evidence at a preliminary hearing last October in a Nebraska mass-murder case. The hearing was open to the public.

The order was one of an increasing number being issued by judges to curtail publicity, which they contend could make it impossible to obtain an impartial jury.

E. Barrett Prettyman Jr., a Washington lawyer representing news media challenging the Nebraska order, said such orders are ineffective and an unconstitutional prior restraint on publications.

"I would be here making this argument even if prior restraints worked," said Prettyman. "They don't work. They result in rumor, gossip and speculation, which is far more dangerous to the defendant than factual reporting in newspapers."

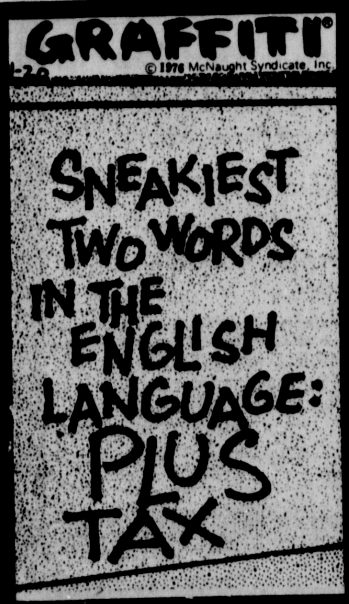

County Attorney Milton R. Larson of Lincoln County, Neb., who successfully prosecuted Erwin Charles Simants for the October slayings, said, "I think if Mrs. Jones tells me something I am going to find it easier to put that aside than if I read in the newspaper that the evidence at a preliminary hearing showed it to be so."

Prettyman, asked by Chief Justice Warren E. Burger if he would take the same position if the judge told lawyers not to talk rather than newspapers not to publish, said an order that would be impermissible if directed at the press might be permissible if framed in a way to restrict out-of-court statements by attorneys.

Floyd Abrams, representing numerous media organizations that supported Nebraska news outlets in the case, said prior restraint on the press was "becoming commonplace and must be curbed. The power to levy prior restraints on news reporting is the power to destroy."

Justice John Paul Stevens asked what should be done about confessions that turn out to be inadmissible in court after they have been reported in the news. "We have to live with that," said Abrams.

Mosher argued that courts must achieve a "delicate balance" between the freedom of the press guaranteed in the First Amendment to the Constitution and the Sixth Amendment's guarantee of a fair trial.

Mrs. Ada M. Bapst

Mrs. Ada M. Graves Bapst, 70 died at 7 a.m. Monday in the home of Mr. and Mrs. L. C. Grindell, 223 W. Ottawa St., Richwood, where she had resided for the past 19 years.

Born in Sabina, Mrs. Bapst had formerly resided in Washington C.H. She was a member of the Claiborne Grange in Richwood.

She is survived by two daughters, Mrs. Betty Lou Stoops of Jeffersonville, and Mrs. Sue Ann Biscioti of Columbus; seven granddaughters and two great-granddaughters; and a sister, Mrs. Jack (Olive) Witherspoon of 425 N. North St. She was preceded in death by two brothers.

Services will be held at 1:30 p.m. Thursday in the Kirkpatrick Funeral Home, Washington C.H., with the Rev. Mark Dove, pastor of the Grace United Methodist Church, officiating. Burial will be in Washington Cemetery.

Friends may call at the funeral home from 6 to 9 p.m. Wednesday.

Dr. Oscar Anderson

Dr. and Mrs. Robert U. Anderson and family of 16 Hali Drive, have just returned from Bethesda, Md., where they attended the funeral of his brother, Dr. Oscar Anderson, senior official in the international affairs office of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration. Dr. Anderson, 57, of Washington D.C., died Wednesday of a heart attack.

An established historian, he joined NASA in 1962. Dr. Anderson was named director of the international program policy division of NASA in 1964. He played a key role in developing space cooperation with the Soviet Union. This resulted in the successful Apollo-Soyuz joint docking mission in July, 1975.

For his contributions to the program between the two nations, Dr. Anderson received both the Superior Performance Award and the Exceptional Service Medal of NASA.

He first came to Washington, D.C. in 1958 to join the history staff of the Atomic Energy Commission. There he helped establish the agency's History Association. He was co-author of the first volume of the AEC's official history, "The New World, 1939-1946," which described the wartime origins of atomic energy research and development in this country. He received the AEC Outstanding Service Award for this work.

Born in South Bend, Ind., Dr. Anderson graduated from Oberlin College, where he was elected to Phi Beta Kappa. He earned a master's degree in history from Harvard University in 1941. He then entered the U.S. Army Air Corps and was an intelligence officer during the war at headquarters of the 6th Bomber Command in the Panama Canal Zone.

Dr. Anderson wrote a history of the command. He left the service in 1946 to return to Harvard University where he earned a doctorate in 1948.

For the next 10 years, he was assistant and then associate professor of history at the University of Cincinnati. He was among the first American historians to describe the role of science and technology in American life.

He is survived by his wife, Dorothy; a daughter, Jessica A. Botsford of Buffalo, N.Y.; a brother, Dr. Robert U. Anderson of Washington C.H.; and one sister, Elizabeth A. Stanz of South Bend.

Agnew book on stands

NEW YORK (AP) — Spiro T. Agnew's much-ballyhooed novel about a future vice president has something for just about everyone: an ambitious politician, a liberal adviser, a beautiful Cabinet officer, Israelis, Arabs, Russians and Chinese.

It is one of those books that seems designed to make people wonder, "Who do you suppose he's really writing about?"

The book jacket describes the writer. "The author, Spiro T. Agnew, lives in Arnold, Maryland, not far in miles from Washington, D.C. He travels the world. He was formerly Vice President of the United States."

The 344-page book, "The Canfield Decision," is being published by Playboy Press. Publication date is May 17, but a Playboy Press spokesman said distribution to bookstores started about 10 days ago. It retails for $8.95.

The Agnew book is the latest in a series of novels by wellknown political figures.

Queen notes 50th birthday

LONDON (AP) — Queen Elizabeth II observes her 50th birthday Wednesday after a 24-year reign that began with hopes for a second glorious Elizabeth Age but has been downhill all the way for Britain.

When George VI died on Feb. 6, 1952, and his older daughter became queen while on a visit to Africa, Britain was Western Europe's leading nation, the pound sterling was one of the world's more stable currencies, there were 100,000 British soldiers in the Suez Canal Zone, and British air and naval bases stretched to Hong Kong.

Today as the queen prepares for a quiet family birthday at Windsor

Castle, Britain's wealth and power are sharply diminished, its empire dismembered, its economy in disarray. "Future historians will have little choice but to dismiss this period of our national life as one of unrelieved failure," the weekly New Statesman said recently. But it added: "The monarchy still appears a stable feature of our national life: perhaps the only thing that is."

The 19th century constitutional expert Walter Bagehot once commented that only three rights remained to the monarch: "the right to be consulted, the right to encourage, the right to warn."

But "after 24 years on the throne, the queen is the only person in Westminster and Whitehall who has followed, at the very highest level, the process of top-level decision-making going back over a whole generation," Paul Johnson, former editor of the New Statesman, wrote in the Daily Express.

"She has outlasted five British prime ministers, four U.S. presidents, three changes of regime in Russia, four German chancellors, two popes, and countless French and Italian governments — to say nothing of such venerable fixtures as De Gaulle, Franco, Chiang Kai-shek and Haile Selassie.

"Only Mao Tse-tung and Marshal Tito can claim greater continuity at the top, and they are in their 80s."

Public criticisms of the queen are confined almost entirely "to the marginal aspects of her existence — her dress-sense, her voice, her ferocious small dogs — and testify merely to the poverty of the material that can be amassed against her personally," the New Statesman said.

Scottish Laborite Willie Hamilton never lets up in his campaign to abolish the monarchy, which he attacks as an expensive, useless anachronism. But in his anti-royalty book last year, "My Queen and I," he said he had never said "a cruel or critical word" against Queen Elizabeth personally.

Most Britons view the royal establishment with quiet pride.

"She's good value for money, she is," one young Londoner said.

Millions still follow the unfolding royal story as if it was their favorite soap opera. The queen and her family are still persistent headline-makers in Britain and among the country's biggest crowd pullers. Thousands throng the Mall and Whitehall every year for the queen's coach ride in October to open Parliament and the Trooping of the Color for the official celebration of her birthday in June, when the weather is most likely to be good.

The queen's oldest son and heir, Prince Charles, has matured into a serious, 27-year-old man with all the attributes Britons look for in a monarch — good looks, a sense of humor, tact, a quick mind and a talent for making people feel at ease.

This has prompted some speculation that his mother may abdicate some day in his favor. But despite the prince's popularity, most Britons would probably not favor the change for many years to come.

The queen has been less lucky in her younger sister, Princess Margaret, who has presented her with the two biggest personal crises of her reign. One was Margaret's romance with a divorced man, Group Capt. Peter Townsend, in 1955. The other was her separation this year from her husband, the Earl of Snowdon.

Because the queen is the titular head of the Church of England and the church frowns on divorce, Margaret renounced Townsend after weeks of family anguish and a fever of public speculation. And though the change in public attitudes in 20 years was reflected by the open acknowledgment that Margaret's marriage had broken down, tradition was maintained by the queen's decision to approve a separation but not a divorce.

Prosecuter attacks Patty Hearst story

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — A prosecutor, challenging Patricia Hearst's credibility as an informer, says the secret bank robbery story she told authorities was motivated by loyalty to her underground lover, Steven Soliah.

Asst. U.S. Atty. Richard Nichols, opposing Soliah's request to open Miss Hearst's revelations to public view, indicated Monday that authorities believed the convict-heiress has lied about the robbery.

Soliah is the only person charged in the April 21, 1975, robbery of a Crocker National Bank branch in suburban Carmichael in which a woman customer was slain by a shotgun blast.

"There is rational reason for disbelieving a woman who wants to look out for her boyfriend, and that's what it comes down to," said Nichols.

Miss Hearst's truthfulness is at the center of a dispute in which a major decision was due today. U.S. District Court Judge Philip Wilkins said he would decide whether to hold a full-fledged hearing demanded by Soliah's defense.

The hearing, eliciting testimony from prosecutors and FBI agents, would investigate details Miss Hearst confided about the Carmichael robbery. The government argued that the story is irrelevant because it probably is not true.

"There is certainly an element of self-servingness and protectiveness to one's friend in any statement Miss Hearst might have made," Nichols said.

Soliah's attorney, Sheldon Otis, said he could prove at a hearing that prosecutors ignored Miss Hearst's scenario of the bank robbery because it differed with the recollections of two eyewitnesses.

"Miss Hearst told them that Steven Soliah was not in the bank when it was robbed," Otis declared. The two eyewitnesses have placed the 27-year-old house painter inside the bank.

Hughes will search still at dead end

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A Hollywood bank safe deposit box maintained by Howard Hughes yielded some jewelry but further stymied those looking for the late billionaire's will, a source knowledgeable about the search says.

A source close to the Summa Corp. said Monday that officials didn't find the will Hughes associates insist he wrote and that some have said he put under lock at the South Hollywood Branch of the Bank of America.

The box held only some "not extremely valuable jewelry," the source said.

Summa runs Hughes' farflung entertainment and aerospace enterprises. Some of the people who were closest to Hughes hold key positions in the corporation.

A former top Hughes aide, Noah Dietrich, said last week that the billionaire made a will and placed it in a box at the South Hollywood bank about two years before Dietrich left the organization in 1957.

Dietrich, Gregson Bautzer, a former Hughes attorney and a spokesman for Summa, restated their belief Monday that a will exists — somewhere.

Investigators are poring over files in Los Angeles and elsewhere for clues to where Hughes left the document telling where he wanted his more than $2 billion in assets distributed after his death, a source told The Associated Press.

Several people have said Hughes indicated he wanted the bulk of his estate turned over to the Hughes Medical Institute in Miami, but so far there has been no legal confirmation of that wish.

Arelo Sederberg, a Summa spokesman, said, "There is a continuing search for a will (but) for legal reasons we're not disclosing how the search is being done.

"We're only saying we think there is a will."

If no will is found, officials have estimated that as much as two-thirds of the estate automatically will revert to government bodies as taxes.

Bautzer, a Los Angeles attorney who did legal work for Hughes for 25 years, confirmed that the box at the South

Hollywood branch of the Bank of America had been opened but didn't say what it contained.

Bautzer said the search for the document may be complicated because he believes Hughes probably wrote the will in his own handwriting without witnesses.

He said Hughes asked him in person and by telephone many times about the legality of holographic (unwitnessed) wills. He said such wills are legal and could be prepared without knowledge of any other person.

But Dietrich says it's unlikely Hughes would have left a secret handwritten will prepared without the aid of typists or attorneys.

City board

Cherry Hill and Rose Avenue schools will tour the Columbus Gallery of Fine Arts sometime in May, and elementary mentally handicapped students at Eastside Elementary School will visit the Columbus Zoo early in May.

The board also approved a weeklong trip to Great Lakes Naval Base for 36 members of the Naval Junior ROTC unit. The "mini-boot camp" is sponsored by the U.S. Department of the Navy which bears almost the entire cost.

The students and two adult supervisors will leave Sunday, April 25, and spend one week in an abbreviated Naval boot camp. They will return Friday, April 30.

According to Naval science instructor H.W. Vail, the benefits include the realization that the students have "not only survived one full week of completely controlled and intensive training...but while surviving the limitless demands made upon them, they have actually enjoyed themselves."

CHRISTMAS VACATION for the 1976-77 school year will be only seven school days. This is three days less than in past years. The board approved the new school calendar which shortens Christmas vacation, but ends the school year in the first week of June. The last day of classes will be June 2, and students will receive their grades Saturday, June 4.

The Fayette County Health Department has received board approval to examine all seventh and eighth grade students for lateral curvature of the spine. Dr. William E. Covert, Fayette County health commissioner, noted that such curvature can be corrected most easily if diagnosed in early development.

The date for the examinations will be arranged later in the present school year.

Those who show signs of spinal curvature will be encouraged to see private physicians.

IN OTHER action, the board:

—Approved use of several school buildings by the board of elections for the June 8 primary;

—Agreed to equally share the cost of a fence around the baseball field with the baseball boosters club;

—Will rent the Middle School auditorium to the Gregg Street Church of Christ in Christian Union for services Sunday, April 25;

—Released two students to attend Miami Trace High School on a tuition basis for the remainder of the school year;

—Approved a six-day leave without pay for one of the school custodians;

—Authorized reimbursement of professional meeting and continuing education expenses for faculty members; and —Tabled action on a gymnastics program proposal submitted by Community Education.

Stocks jump at opening

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market surged higher in active trading early today.

The opening Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stock prices was ahead more than two points.

The advance was widespread, with New York Stock Exchange issues rising in price holding a 3-1 margin on those declining.

The market closed Monday on the upswing, with investors encouraged by a better than expected showing for the Gross National Product in the first three months of the year.

The market has benefitted by other economic activity, analysts said, including a higher new car sales estimate by General Motors and relatively low yields in the bond market.

Reports of higher corporate profits have also been reaching the market in the past few days, giving a boost to individual stocks.

Today's early prices included American Telephone & Telegraph, up 1/4 at 56; Braniff International, up 1/4 at 10 3/4; and Sears Roebuck, up 1/2 at 74 3/4.

On Monday, the Dow Jones industrial average closed at 988.11, a gain of 7.63. NYSE listed stocks advancing in price held a 10-4 margin on those declining.

Opinion And Comment

Silencing of Daniel Schorr

The well known broadcast newsmen Sander Vanocur has raised a pertinent question about an even better known colleague. In essence the question is: Why should Daniel Schorr be put out to pasture by the Columbia Broadcasting System while the House Ethics Committee investigates his handling of the secret House Intelligence Committee report?

This is not just a matter of concern to journalists. The public interest is deeply involved in the implications of this episode.

Schorr, who is admiringly described by Vanocur as "the toughest and best reporter in television news," got into hot water when he made a copy of the House intelligence report available to the Village Voice. He did so after the House had voted not to release the report—but also after the gist of it already had been published in various newspapers.

There are valid differences of opinion as to the wisdom and propriety of what Schorr did. He himself apparently felt that if he did not hand over the forbidden report for publication the public would be deprived of the committee's findings. Some applaud what he did; some deplore it.

But whether Schorr's action was foolish or commendably high-principled is not the point at issue. He is not being disciplined on the grounds that he violated the unwritten canons of journalistic ethics; he is merely suspended from his reporting duties pending the outcome of the congressional investigation.

Why? What acceptable purpose is served? Writing in the Washington Post, Vanocur says CBS is "standing by Schorr in his battle with the House investigators" and is paying his legal costs. "But might it not be in order," he properly asks, "for the sake of its own reputation, and for what Schorr has come to symbolize in a medium dominated by timidity, for CBS to allow Schorr to return to active reporting? We join in asking that, and we say yes to it.

A WORD EDGEWISE...By John P. Roche

The tenure trap

A while ago we were exploring here the problems facing institutions of higher education — public and private — as their funding withers away. The focus was on the conflict between faculties and administrations over where the ax should cut. Unfortunately in a labor intensive enterprise like education there is only one way to save money: Get rid of personnel. The argument is only one way to save money: can still be heard that if the president would just get out and hustle, more funds would arrive. But unless, as occurred recently at the University of Rochester, a donor suddenly comes through with a staggering gift (over $25 million in that case), up go tuition, fees, room and board (figure $6,500-plus a year at most private schools), down go scholarships, and out go junior faculty and non-academic staff.

Since seniority and academic tenure go hand in hand, the net result of cutting faculty might be summed up by the old rule in shipwrecks: "Women and children first." The rule, of course, has been stood on its head. Instead of women and children receiving priority in the lifeboats, they have the privilege of walking the plank. If you look at the faculty age profile at most institutions, you discover a huge bulge of tenured professors in their 40s and 50s. This reflects the tremendous jump in higher education in the post-World War II period and the unfortunate practice in the lush post-Sputnik era of passing tenure out like peanuts at a cocktail party.

Indeed, the day an individual was hired there was an unarticulated presumption that after the initial seven-year period he or she would get tenure. It became almost a matter of right. There was a good deal of loose chatter about the "publish or perish" rule, but a close investigation will show that most tenured faculty at most institutions neither published nor perished in any significant scholarly sense. I was (and am still) considered a terrible spoiler when serving on tenure evaluation committees: My view is that nobody should become a tenured associate professor unless he or she has published at least as much as I did to get promoted from instructor to assistant professor without tenure.

In the late 50s and early 60s I was consistently voted down with the result that in many departments the future was mortgaged. When I argued that letting go someone marginal (in my view) would provide an opening seven years thence, I was accused of pessimism. In seven years the department would be doubled, there would be plenty of room! Besides, the candidate was a nice person — and his publication record was no worse than that of X, who had received tenure two years ago (another vote I lost). Then the bubble burst. Over 150 applicants responded this year to an advertisement for two temporary positions in a nearby political science department! (Incidentally, a department in which no one is scheduled to retire until the mid-1980s.)

So how do we make room for the really able young men and women? About 1988 there will be a great mass of retirements — my academic generation — but between now and then tenure awards will be few and far between. (The last figures I saw indicated that, nationally, over two-thirds of all faculty are tenured.)

One step would be to modify the present iron-clad tradition that after seven years, it's up or out. Devised by the Depression-oriented American Association of University Professors to eliminate the old serfdom (under which teachers could be kept on for 25 or 30 years without tenure), it is now counterproductive. Replace it with a 10-year period, renewable for five years, and decouple tenure from both status and salary — i.e., you could have an untenured full professor making $25,000 a year.

Moving from the other end, efforts should be made to encourage early retirement, say at age 60 or, using military and civil service rules, after 30 years of full-time teaching. This would involve financial readjustments, but the cost to institutions would be more than compensated by the voluntary departure of professors who are routinely going through their drill, boring even themselves, but stuck in place until they hit 65. (With the 30-year rule I could totter off in 1979 instead of being gently led to pasture in 1988!) This must be given serious consideration to prevent academic stagnation for the next decade.

Demo solons seek U.S. seats

By TOM DIEMER
Associated Press Writer
COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Three Democratic state senators, midway through their current legislative terms, are on the campaign trail in bids for election to Congress.

Two of them, Sens. Anthony J. Celebrezze Jr., D-25 Cleveland, and Donald J. Pease, D-13 Oberlin, are aiming at northeastern Ohio districts that will be vacated by incumbent congressmen.

A third, Sen. William F. Bowen, D-9 Cincinnati, is challenging the present officeholder. But unlike his two Senate colleagues, Bowen is assured a November race since he is unopposed in the June 8 Democratic primary.

Celebrezze's contest in the 20th district is unique.

The 34-year-old attorney has 11 primary opponents, including his cousin James P. Celebrezze, a former state representative. The others are Michael L. Cimaco, Norbert G. Dennerl Jr., John T. Flanagan, Donald T. Gallagher, Edward A. Ginley, Michael G. Kelly, Ronald J. Novak, Mary Rose Oaker, Basil M. Russo, and Raymond A. Stachewicz.

Whoever emerges from the pack will face independents Raymond J. Grabow and Theodore Held III in November, but no Republican. A GOP candidate has not filed.

The seat will be left open by the departure of Rep. James V. Stanton, who is running for the Democratic nomination to the U.S. Senate.

Pease, a 44-year-old newspaper editor, is seeking office in the 13th district where Charles A. Mosher, a Republican from Lorain, is retiring. Pease faces John Michael Ryan, of Lorain who opposed Mosher in 1972, and Robert C. Salkowitz, also of Lorain.

Woodrow W. Mathna, former mayor of Lorain, and Huron Councilman Peter A. Walderzak are vying for the Republican nomination.

Bowen, a 46-year-old businessman, can relax, at least until June 9. In November, he will face either Rep. Willis D. Gradison, the Republican incumbent, or William E. Flax of Cincinnati who is taking on Gradison in the primary. Independent Christopher L. Martinson of Cincinnati, is also in the race.

Bowen, Pease and Celebrezze all enjoy the luxury of a secure seat in Columbus if they fail to attain Congressional seats in Washington. All three Senate terms run until 1978.

Dear Abby:

ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

Teeth heir wants to recycle dentures

DEAR ABBY: I hope you won't think this is a stupid question, but I don't know who else to ask.

Is there some place that buys used dentures?

I have six sets that are good as new. They belonged to members of my family who are now deceased. Three pair belonged to my grandmother, and she never wore any of them for more than three months.

It seems a shame to just throw them out if they could be of use to someone. I would even be glad to GIVE them away if you could tell me where to send them.

I called my own dentist and asked if he wanted to buy them, and he said, "My God, lady, I don't BUY dentures, I SELL them!"

Please answer this as I am serious.

TEETH ON MY HANDS
DEAR ABBY: There's undoubtedly a law (with teeth in it) prohibiting the sale of used dentures. And I wouldn't know to whom you could give them.

DEAR ABBY: The letter from the 31-year-old irate bachelor who always gets the "how-come-you're-not-married" routine when applying for employment prompts this letter:

I'm 45 and divorced many years with no intention of remarrying. Ten years ago I applied for a position with the Chamber of Commerce of one of Ohio's largest cities.

The interview went very well until the man in charge said, "I notice on your resume that you're not married." Then he said with a wink, "Not a 'homo' by any chance, are you?"

I just looked at him incredulously while he went on to sermonize on the virtues of marriage and explain that the Chamber wanted a "family man" whose wife could socialize with the wives of other chamber members and how a single man was usually "unstable" and just wouldn't fit in. He made it clear that a single man was "suspect" and didn't quite have the wholesome, highly moral image they required.

A week later, the same man called and asked me to meet him downtown for dinner that evening to "talk things over." Thinking that he had reconsidered hiring me, I gladly accepted.

When I got to the restaurant he had already had a few drinks, but he wasn't drunk. He was very friendly and told me what a handsome, sophisticated, cool young man I was, as he gripped my hand and slapped my thigh.

He went on to say that his wife and kids were at the lake for a week and he enjoyed being a bachelor for a while because he was trapped in a rotten marriage, etc.

"What about the job?" I asked.
"No. Too bad. They still prefer a stable, family-type man. But how about coming to the house and spending the weekend with me, because I'm not all that straight, and I really dig the gay life?"

I simply got up, shook his hand and walked out as he burst into tears and yelled, "Go to hell, you-!"

Today In History

By The Associated Press
Today is Tuesday, April 20, the 111th day of 1976. There are 255 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:
On this date in 1775, the American siege of British forces in Boston began in the American Revolution.

On this date—
In 1657, Jews in New Amsterdam were granted equal rights and privileges of citizens.

In 1662, Connecticut was granted a royal charter extending to the Pacific Ocean.

In 1836, the U.S. Congress established the territory of Wisconsin.

In 1889, Adolf Hitler was born in Austria.

In 1934, Shirley Temple was launched on her career as a child star as the film, "Stand Up and Cheer," was released.

In 1945, in World War II, Soviet forces penetrated the defenses of Berlin, and the U.S. Seventh Army captured the German city of Nuernberg.

Ten years ago: U.S. planes attacking North Vietnam made their closest strikes yet to the key port of Haiphong, bombing a railway bridge.

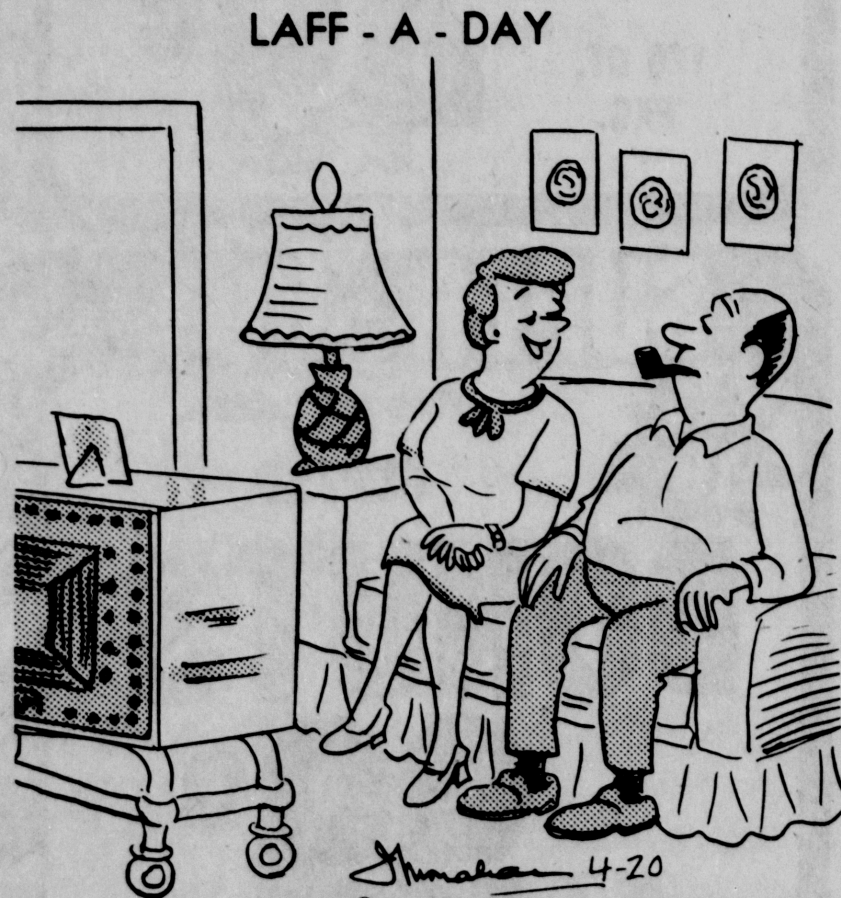

Five years ago: The U.S. Supreme Court unanimously ruled that busing of students could be ordered to achieve racial desegregation.

One year ago: Communist forces overrunning South Vietnam eased up in their drive toward Saigon but continued to cut off the city from surrounding territory.

Today's birthdays: Former New York Mayor Robert Wagner is 66. Nuclear physicist Alvin Weinberg is 61.

Thought for today: An economist is a man who knows more about money than the people who have it — anonymous.

Bicentennial footnote: Two hundred years ago today, Richard Henry Lee wrote to his fellow Virginian, Patrick Henry, that Virginia must take the lead in forming the Continental Congress into a government, and other colonies would follow.

"Let's do something different tonight, dear. You sit here and I'll sit there."

The light-hearted

story is basically, historically sound. Its Bicentennial theme is that basic human values do not change.

Bullet explodes, strikes local youngster in neck

Mixing fire and bullets can be dangerous as three Washington C.H. youngsters learned Monday when one of the youths received a laceration of the neck from an exploding bullet. The youngsters were reportedly playing with matches and numerous small caliber bullets around the rear of 330 Jupiter Street at 12:30 p.m. Monday. One of the bullets exploded, striking John Heidler, 9, of 1117 Lakeview Ave., in the neck. He was treated and released from Fayette County Memorial Hospital. Washington C.H. Police Spec. William Robinson advised the parents of necessary precautions with regard to children and ammunition. Two youths were bitten by the same dog as they were walking in front of 320 Ely Street at 7 p.m. Monday. Robert Dawes, 8, of 345 Ely St., was bitten on the leg, while Keith W. Eckles, 14, of 1406 Washington Ave., was bitten and scratched on the chest. The second youth was treated and released from Fayette County Memorial Hospital as a result of the 7 p.m. Monday incident. Frank Terrell, 304 S. North St., told police officers that sometime last Wednesday a $15 flower pot was removed from his back porch.

Generally cloudy skies and cooler temperatures moved into the state overnight and north to northeast breezes following a weak cold front across the state were expected to hold down temperatures today. Highs were expected to reach the mid to upper 60s north near Lake Erie to the mid 70s in the central portions and around 80 south.

Some scattered rain showers were to occur today with increasing showers or thundershowers expected tonight and Wednesday.

A low pressure storm area in Oklahoma will be moving toward the Mississippi Valley early Wednesday and will bring increasing moisture into the Ohio Valley, setting off thundershowers across the state.

Temperature will continue mild with lows tonight again in the 50s and highs Wednesday in the 70s.

A chance of showers Thursday and Saturday. Fair Friday. Highs in the 60s north and 70s south and lows in the 40s and low 50s.

Sabina man faces charge

BURLINGTON, Ky. (AP) — Federal firearms agents have filed a charge of failing to report a gun being carried aboard an airplane against a Sabina, Ohio man, held by Boone County Police.

Jeffrey Freeland, 22, was arrested by security police at Greater Cincinnati Airport Friday after a nine millimeter pistol and $53,100 was found in his baggage.

Freeland, held under $10,000 bond, is scheduled for arraignment Thursday in Boone County Court on a charge of carrying a concealed weapon.

Agents of the treasury department's Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms filed the felony gun charge after questioning Freeland in jail Monday.

Boone County Police Chief Thomas Schwartz said the gun was reported stolen in Dayton, Ohio.

Schwartz said the FBI ran a check on the cash and was unable to trace it.

Anchor Hocking earnings zoom

LANCASTER, Ohio (AP) — Anchor Hocking Corp. earnings in the first quarter of 1976 were up 100 per cent over the same period in 1975, board chairman and chief executive officer John L. Gushman said Monday.

First quarter earnings were a record $7.4 million, or $1.10 per share, based on fewer outstanding shares in 1976. That figure was more than twice the earnings of $3.7 million, or 54 cents per share, during the first quarter of last year.

Committee candidates in 3-B

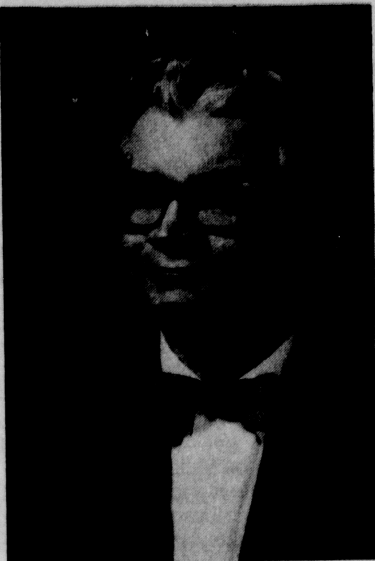

Unopposed candidates for committeemen in the June 8 primary election in Precinct B of the city's third ward are Elmer N. Reed, 619 Fairway Drive, and William G. Ward, 629 Perdue Plaza.

Reed, a Republican, is running for the position of committeeman for the second time. He says that he's always been interested in politics. Reed, a retired industrial engineer from the Armco Steel Corp. Metal Products Division plant in Washington C.H., is a member of the Fayette County Board of Elections and secretary-treasurer of the Fayette County Republican Executive Committee.

Ward, a Democrat, is running for the committee position for the second time. He is employed by

At meeting of county commissioners

Airport improvements studied

The Fayette County Board of Commissioners met with airport operator John Woodmansee Monday to discuss the local air facility.

Woodmansee said that several repairs would be necessary in the near future. He noted cracks in the runways, need for repair of the roadway leading into the airport and remodeling of the office area.

The commissioners said Woodmansee also mentioned possible extension of the runway and office buildings sometime in the future.

Also in connection with the airport, the commissioners considered requests from the Fayette County Pilots Association for permission to erect a permanent memorial to the late Bill Dennis and to rename the facility in his honor.

The commissioners replied by supporting any efforts the pilots association wishes to undertake toward the erection of a memorial. They also asked the association to consider some tribute to others who have been active in the growth of the local airport.

They did not favor a change of the airport name, however. They felt Fayette County Airport was most appropriate for the county-operated facility.

NEW BOOKKEEPING machinery was purchased for the county auditor's office. A National Cash Register Co. electric accounting machine will be ordered at a cost of $12,130. NCR submitted the lower of two bids on the accounting machine.

Only one bid was received for work on the Mount Eber ditch. The commissioners have not yet decided whether to accept the bid or reject it and readvertise.

A meeting between the commissioners and county engineer Charles P. Wagner has been scheduled for 10 a.m. Friday. The group will discuss plans for summer resurfacing and road repair programs.

Kaye F. Bartlett and Robert Lutz, members of the Community Education advisory council, met with the commissioners Monday afternoon to discuss financing of the Community Education program.

Bartlett and Lutz asked the commissioners if they could help support the Community Education program financially, but no immediate action was taken by the board.

Beer strike continues

ST. LOUIS (AP) — The longest strike in the history of Anheuser-Busch, Inc., continued today, keeping 8,000 workers off the job at nine breweries across the country.

After 51 days, however, some cracks appeared in the united front of brewery workers Monday as about 100 members of Brewers and Maltsters Local 6 counterpicketed here at the largest of the firm's breweries Monday.

"We're tired of being out of work," said Emil Nassif, a member of Local 6. "This strike doesn't concern Local 6 at all."

Striking bottlers from other plants closed the St. Louis brewery March 1 and Teamsters Local 1187 representing about 1,500 bottlers here joined the dispute March 25. The St. Louis brewery employs about 4,000 persons.

Police said six persons, one of them wielding a baseball bat were arrested outside the plant Monday as trucks from a local distributor left the plant with beer that was to have been made available to St. Louis retailers today.

Fire doused

A 12:48 p.m. Monday rubbish fire was extinguished by Washington C.H. firemen.

The fire, occurring at a sawdust dump on 808 Lakeview Avenue, was doused with water.

For Community Education program here

Executive committee proposal OKd

A proposal submitted by Kay F. Bartlett, chairman of the Washington C.H. Area Community Education advisory council, that an executive committee for Community Education be created was approved Monday night by the Washington C.H. Board of Education.

According to Bartlett, the function of the proposed executive committee would be to establish policy for Community Education within and in compliance with the policies of the board of education. A five-member committee will form policies in the areas of program, finance and community relations, as well as in other areas as may be necessary, according to the proposal.

The executive committee will approve recommendations made to the Washington C.H. Board of Education and it will be recognized that the board is not abrogating any of its responsibility or authority in creating the committee.

Bartlett said that the organizational change is consistent with earlier decisions approved by the Community Education advisory council (the initial body asked by the Washington C.H. Board of Education to develop the Community Education proposal), and is being undertaken to improve communications and strengthen the total Community Education program.

The council will continue to function and represent a broad spectrum of community interests in providing director Hank Shaffer with advice on all aspects of the program and potential program activities. Through the executive committee, the advisory council will work with the school board on policy matters.

Appointments to the executive committee will be made by the Board of Education after nomination by Superintendent Edwin M. Nestor from names supplied advisory council chairman. Nominees will be selected from those persons active on the advisory council.

The chairman of the advisory council will be a member of the executive committee and will serve as its chairman. One member of the board of education will serve on the executive committee and the superintendent will be an ex-officer (non-voting) member of the executive committee.

Each member of the executive committee will serve a term of two years. During the first year, two persons will serve terms of one year. Persons may be re-appointed to the executive committee.

Meetings of the executive committee, which will occur monthly or at other times as may be necessary, will be called by the chairman or by a majority of the committee. Summary minutes will be kept of the meetings and will be sent to the superintendent by the chairman.

The Community Education program

director will be responsible to the executive committee in areas of policy and will be responsible to the superintendent and board of education for administrative matters, as well as serving as a recording secretary for the executive committee.

Submission of agenda items to the chairman by the program director for inclusion in meetings of the executive committee and bringing all matters pertaining to Community Education before the executive committee, will be responsibilities of the director.

Boston blacks hit white man, train

BOSTON (AP) — Gangs of black youths in Boston's Roxbury section beat a white man and stopped a long-distance passenger train and stoned its crew in the latest in a series of racial incidents in the city, police said.

Richard Poleet, 31, of Boston was dragged from his car Monday night and was kicked and beaten on the head with bricks by 15 to 20 black youths, officers said. He was on the danger list at a hospital early today, officials said.

About the same time, a gang a mile away stoned trainmen trying to remove old tires and tree limbs piled on the tracks. No passengers or trainmen were injured, an Amtrak spokesman said.

Police reported no arrests in either incident.

Stonings of cars passing through the predominantly black Roxbury section were reported throughout the evening. Police said at least four windshields were smashed.

A white man and woman were treated for head cuts after stones smashed their car windows not far from the intersection where Poleet was beaten.

Police said both gangs apparently came from housing projects near the neighborhoods where the attacks occurred and retreated into the projects when patrol cars appeared.

Saturday, white youths beat two black bus drivers and three white drivers who came to their rescue. And two weeks ago, white antibusing demonstrators beat a black attorney with a pole bearing the American flag and others kicked him in an incident just outside Boston City Hall.

Racial violence has flared sporadically in Boston since a federal district court two years ago ordered school children bused between black and white neighborhoods as part of a school integration plan.

Estonia, officially the Estonian Soviet Socialist Republic, is one of 15 major administrative divisions of the Soviet Union. It covers an area of 17,410 square miles and its population in 1970 was 1,410,000. Its capital and largest city is Tallinn.

Ondrus hiring makes him 26th not 19th grid boss

Pardon me. I made another mistake on the sports page. It wasn't my first, nor will it be my last.

William Bourke, a retired newspaperman now living in Washington C.H., has come forward to reveal my last erroneous statement. Anyway, I think it was my last.

Bourke enlightened me on the number of football coaches employed by Washington Senior High School over the years. In Friday's edition, I mentioned that Paul Ondrus, the newly hired Blue Lion grid boss, would become the 19th grid coach in the school's history.

"Phooey!" Bourke wrote in a letter to me. "If Ondrus gets the nod he will be the 26th coach since football began at WHS in 1902."

Who is to argue with Bourke, the author of a soon to be published book on the history of high school football in Washington C.H. Besides he sent along a list of the coaches I neglected to count.

"The first was Orville P. Cockerill in 1902, '03 and '04," Bourke wrote. "Cockerill teams won 14, lost 6 and tied 1. He was followed by D.L. Thompson in '05 and '06, who won 13, lost 1 and tied 1."

"Herman P. Swinehart held sway in '07 and '08. Next came Fred McElwain in '09, '10 and '11. His best year was in 1920, when WHS won 8 and lost 1. Urban Hidy ruled in 1912 and a fellow named Shively in '13. I can't find anybody who remembers his first name."

"Rudolph (Dutch) Schlabach (he always carried a paddle to practice) ruled in '14, and '15; Chauncey Plyley in '16 and '17. Because of WW I, there was no coach in 1918 but Willis (Pete) Willis, a senior stalwart directed the team to a two victory, one-defeat year."

"Charles Morehead came in 1919. He was young, barely older than five war vets on his squad. Anyone who ever saw the team of 1919 will argue that it was the greatest ever. It won eight, was undefeated and untied. Morehead continued with Tom Rogers as captain in 1920. That team lost its seventh game at Circleville, 12-6, a disaster attributed to partisan officials."

"After winning 18 of 19, Morehead's third year, 1921, was plain disaster: nine losses and one tie. Warren W. Vanarsdall was in his second year when your saga begins in 1923."

Bourke's letter ended with "I hope this billet doux will deepen your perspective."

That it did Mr. Bourke, I got my information from a list of coaches that is run each fall in the Record-Herald's football edition. The list dates back to 1923 and I merely add the previous season's coach and team record each year. Thanks to Bourke, I will be adding names to the bottom of the list this September.

Incidentally, Bourke's book, "WHS Football—A 75-Year Retrospective," is in its first pains of childbirth. Publication is expected in mid-June.

The information Bourke sent in his letter was from his "Roll of Coaches." He also lists the paid assistant coaches and faculty managers. He also has a section called "The Long Blue Line" containing 1,250 names of persons who contributed to Washington C.H. football while students. Even five girl statisticians are named along with team stars and waterboys.

Bourke still needs pictures of teams from 1930 through 1965 to complete the book which is sponsored by the Washington Senior High School Athletic Department and the Football Boosters Club. It is a Bicentennial project endorsed by the Fayette County Bicentennial Committee and the Fayette County Historical Society.

The Huntington Bank is handling the pre-publication sale at $7.50 per copy. The price after publication will be $10.

I suppose I ought to have one.

Panther reserves sweep

Two excellent pitching performances by Shawn Riley and Don Eyre gave the Miami Trace reserve baseball team a sweep of a Saturday twinbill with Westfall.

Riley kept his earned run average at 0.00 for 21 innings tossing a four-hitter in the first game. Riley struck out nine

Westfall batters in the 6-1 win. The Westfall run was unearned.

Don Eyre followed Riley's performance with a one-hitter in the second game as the Panthers posted a 4-0 win.

Coach Jeff Parker said it was by far Eyre's best performance of the season. He had excellent control on his way to a 13-strikeout game.

In the hitting department, Dave Hennessy had three singles in the first game and Ben Stockwell went three for three in the second with a double and three RBIs.

The two wins upped the Panther reserves' record to 5-3. They will return to action this Saturday with a home doubleheader against Circleville.

Ohio State captures Muirfield golf title

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Ohio State has captured the first annual Muirfield Invitational Collegiate Golf Tournament by five strokes, but an Ohio Wesleyan senior won individual medalist honors.

Jim Ryan shot a two under par 74 Monday, edging OSU's Ralph Guarasci with a 75 for individual honors.

Pete Rose has doubts of breaking Joltin' Joe's mark

CINCINNATI (AP) — Pete Rose was only a couple of months old when Joe DiMaggio set a major league baseball record in 1941 with his hitting streak of 56 consecutive games.

DiMaggio's streak is still a record and is being mentioned more than ever around the Cincinnati Reds' clubhouse where Rose currently has a 22 game hitting streak going.

But, with all due respects, the bulldog-tough third baseman doubts that DiMaggio's streak can be duplicated in the current area of specialization.

"It's so hard to get any lengthy streak going because of today's relief pitching," said Rose, who is hitting .514 after eight games, thanks to a searing 18-for-35 start.

Hitting is Rose's grand obsession, but the 35-year-old veteran has not gotten overly excited about his streak.

"You don't want to start thinking about that," he said. "I just swing and hope. You've got to be super lucky. You've got to be lucky just to hit .300."

Rose has been lucky for ten of his years in the majors and ten days ago, he moved past Lou Brock of St. Louis as the all-time hit leader among active

National League players. Rose has 2,565 hits during his 14-year career, 49th on the all-time list.

Hot streaks are nothing new for Rose, who is five games away from tying the Reds' all-time mark of 27, jointly held by Edd Roush and Vada Pinson. Roush did it twice, in 1920 and 1924, and Pinson equalled it in 1965.

"Another time I hit safely in 39 of 40 games. I hit .400 during that two-month stretch," Rose recalled.

DiMaggio had a .408 batting average and 55 runs batted in during his 1941 batting binge which began on May 15 and July 17.

"That's got to be baseball's greatest record because of the consistency involved," Rose said.

Rose said he's not even thinking about the 14 in a row from last season. "You can't let that stuff start working on you," he said. "Actually I've hit safely in 31 of the last 32 games. I should have a 32-game string going."

"I've never hit the ball harder than in the first game of the World Series, yet I didn't get a hit."

Rose was held hitless in the opener by Boston Red Sox pitcher Luis Tiant, but ended up as the top hitter in the series with a .370 average.

Trace breezes to dual track victory

Miami Trace won eight of ten running events to hand Logan an 84 1-6 to 42 5-6 loss in a dual track meet on the Panthers' oval Monday.

The Panthers had three double winners in their sixth dual meet of the season. It was their fourth win.

Dan Gifford again dominated the jumping events with his usual first in the high jump and a first in the long jump. Greg Cobb took the sprints with wins in the 100-yard and 220-yard dash. Bill Hanners remained undefeated in both the mile and the half-mile run since he started doubling in the events earlier this season.

Gifford cleared 6'2" in the high jump and he was again backed up superbly by Art Schlachter, who took second with a 6'0" leap. Gifford picked up five more points in the long jump and Garry Conn gave the Panthers a point with a third place finish in the event.

Logan won the other three field events, but the Panthers continued to pick up points with Ralph Fast returning to earlier form to take second in both the discus and the shot. Jon Sagar added a point with a third in the discus.

The duo of Rod Garringer and Randy Hinkley placed two, three in the pole vault to round out the Panthers' field events scoring.

Scott Gerber and Brad Smith opened the running events with a one, two finish in the high hurdles, and Cobb followed with a first in the 100-yard dash. Cobb was followed by a three-way tie for second in the race. Teammates Lonnie Hixon and Brian Zurface along with a Logan runner sprinted the distance in :11.1. It was the first of three ties which accounted for the odd point totals.

Miami Trace swept the mile run with Hanners winning in 4:39.5, exactly two seconds off the school record. Terry Rodgers followed with a second place finish coming back strong after sitting out a week due to illness.

Logan broke up the Miami Trace dominance of the running events with successive wins in the half-mile relay and the 440 run. In the quarter mile Dave Ritenour and Schlachter picked up points with second and third finishes.

The Panthers got back on the right track with a sweep of the low hurdles.

Bruce Ervin won the event with David Creamer and Smithson placing second and third.

Hanners breezed to another half-mile win with Brian Lucas picking up his second point of the day with a third-place finish.

In the 220, Cobb and a Logan sprinter finished in a dead heat for first. Zurface placed second, but a second Logan sprinter matched him stride for stride causing another tie.

Bill Ooten won the two-mile run and Jim Milstead placed third.

The Panthers capped off the meet with a first place in the mile relay.

The Panthers will return to dual action Tuesday at home against Unioto. A tougher match is ahead on Thursday when Panther Coach Bill Beatty returns to Hillsboro to take on the Indians in a dual.

Mets win 17-inning contest

AP Sports Writer

With one wave of his wand, Del Unser made a baseball disappear and at the same time changed himself from a goat into a hero.

A misplay by the New York centerfielder allowed two St. Louis runs in the first inning, but he made up for it in the 17th with a home run that provided the Mets with a 4-3 victory Monday night.

"When you get into extra innings, there's no sense fooling around," said Unser, who pulverized a Mike Wallace fastball with two out to break up a marathon four-hour, 46-minute game. The shot heard 'round Busch Stadium settled a dramatic battle which had been tied by the Cardinals in the seventh inning, some two hours before.

Unser went up to the plate with one thing in mind: "I was just thinking of swinging at the ball and swinging hard."

Wallace said later he was just thinking of one thing, too: Throwing a fastball on the first pitch to get ahead.

"He's the type of guy that wanted to get ahead," said Unser, who once played with Wallace on the Philadelphia Phillies. "If he had, he's got a good fork ball, and a good curve and he would have been tough to hit."

Extra-inning games are old hat between the Cardinals and Mets. Two years ago, they played a seven-hour, 25-inning affair at Shea Stadium, the longest night game in baseball history.

In the other National League games, the Houston Astros beat the Los Angeles Dodgers 8-3 and the Montreal Expos downed the Chicago Cubs 4-3. In the American League, the California Angels belted the Baltimore Orioles 9-4; the Oakland A's tripped the Detroit Tigers 6-5 in 10 innings and the Boston Red Sox blanked the Minnesota Twins 2-0.

Unser's hit was his first in eight at-bats and the only extra-base blow among 18 Mets hits off Wallace and five other Cardinal pitchers. Aided by a St. Louis error, New York wiped out a 2-0 St. Louis lead with a three-run burst in the second inning and protected that slim edge until Vic Harris and pinch-hitter Ron Fairly rifled doubles for the Cards off New York ace Tom Seaver.

Seaver then departed in the eighth, giving way to Skip Lockwood, who was followed to the mound by Ken Sanders and Bob Apodaca, 1-0, the winner.

Astros 8, Dodgers 3
Jose Cruz belted a three-run triple to key a four-run first inning and trigger Houston past Los Angeles. Cruz' hit climaxed the Astros' big first inning and provided them with their eventual winning run.

The victory boosted Houston into an unaccustomed position — first place in the NL West.

Expos 4, Cubs 3
Pete Mackanin's two-run homer in the fourth inning and Mike Jorgensen's RBI double in the seventh carried Montreal past Chicago. Mackanin's belt, following a walk to Tim Foli, was the 13th of his career but ironically only the first with a man on base.

Angels 9, Orioles 4
Bobby Bonds made his debut with California by drilling three singles and stealing a base and the Angels erupted with a 13-hit attack to rout Baltimore in a game marred by a beanball war. The trouble erupted in the eighth inning when Mark Belanger of Baltimore was sent sprawling in the dirt by Angels starter and winner Frank Tanana.

TV Viewing

By JAY SHARBUTT
AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — News specials

usually don't draw big ratings, but the season's ratings race is over. This may be why viewers are being offered not one but three prime-time news specials tonight.

Two are on CBS, "Mr. Rooney Goes to Dinner" at 8 p.m. EST and "Inside Public Television" at 10 p.m. The latter show is competing with an ABC News special called "Gun Control: Pro And Con."

Further complicating viewer choices is the fact that the Public Broadcast Service has chosen tonight to feed public TV stations a brilliant film documentary, "Antonia: Portrait of the Woman."

That show, by film maker Jill Godmillow and singer Judy Collins, is a warm, exceptionally interesting profile of conductor Antonia Brico, one of the first women to lead a major symphony orchestra.

Give this show a look if you've time. Or find out when your station will rerun it this week if tonight's showing conflicts with reporter-writer Andy Rooney's CBS study of eats and dining out in America.

You've got to watch "Mr. Rooney Goes to Dinner." It's kind of a burpee's catalogue of woe and hope, done in the gentle, whimsical, yet solidly reported style of his "Rooney Goes to Washington" show of 1975.

His "Dinner" hour is most thorough, studying not only eating places but also wine lists, advertising and menus. There's even a valuable warning against dining at joints featuring "home cooking."

One of the funniest moments — and it'll be most satisfying for all victims of long waits for unsatisfying meals — comes when Rooney brings the CBS camera to watch him lunch at a famous New Orleans restaurant.

For some reason, perhaps the camera, he gets superb service. We soon learn the service wasn't so hot the previous night, when Rooney, two pals and no camera, ate at the place, disguised as ordinary tourists.

We won't reveal what ensued when Rooney discussed this with the waiter — you'll have to watch to fully appreciate the moment — but suffice it to say a mighty blow is struck for all long-suffering diners.

Of the competing ABC and CBS news specials later tonight, we'd have to give the nod to ABC's gun show, half of which is devoted to folks advocating stronger legislation to control handgun ownership.

The second half hears from pro-gun forces who, as the show notes, argue that "the need is not for gun control; it is for better crime control."

This half-and-half technique seems quite effective. It focuses the issues more sharply than the usual news special method of seven-second claims immediately followed by seven-second rebuttals.

In Roman numerals the letter C represents 100.

Hookers harried by policewoman

JOLIET, Ill. (AP) — J.J. is a seductive-looking policewoman who sauntered through a prostitute-ridden parking lot, waiting to get propositioned, police here say. So far, she has been in on 86 arrests.

"It's a ghost town out there now," said Police Sgt. Dale Vollmer. "The prostitutes are packing up and leaving town. They just don't have the customers anymore."

Vollmer estimated that 38 hookers worked the parking area of an all-night restaurant and motel complex, charging from $20 to $50 for their services.

"They were doing $1 million a year in business," said Vollmer. "Customers were coming from all parts of the country. Quite a few of them were truckers turning off nearby Interstate 80. The news of the hooker hotbed spread by word of mouth and CB radio and we couldn't stop it."

"When we arrested the prostitutes they'd pay their bail and be back in half an hour," Vollmer continued. "We tried sitting on the street shooting off a flash camera every time a girl went up to a car, but that didn't bother anybody. Our big hope was to get the men so scared they wouldn't come back."

That was when J.J. became a decoy. Dressed in a black wig, a leather coat and blue jeans, and with a snub-nosed .38 in her ankle holster, the policewoman huddled over coffee in the cafe along with the other professionals waiting for clients.

Vollmer said J.J., who has a black belt in karate, also hung around outside, where as many as 1,200 cars on Friday and Saturday nights would cruise around the lot, tooting horns for business.

"J.J. would be propositioned. She would tell her clients to meet her in a room at the motel at a certain time. When they showed up with her, detectives were there to make the arrest," said Vollmer. "She was in on 86 of the 100 arrests we made. Things really started quieting down when the local newspaper began printing the names of those charged," he said.

Vollmer said 42 of those arrested pleaded guilty of soliciting for prostitution and paid $100 fines. Some jumped bond and the cases of others are still backlogged in court.

J.J. says she was a little nervous at her first arrest, "but from then on it was a breeze. Cars of men kept coming along like a merry-go-round. As long as you're female and breathing they'll come to you."

"It would begin with a 'Hey Baby' then, 10 minutes or so later the man would be under arrest," said J.J.

"There isn't a type we didn't get — barbers, lawyers, executives, truck driver, hippies, farm boys. 'Some of them would just break down and cry, or try to talk their way out by saying they just were trying to learn the facts of life,' she said.

But, J.J. added, "We didn't take a single man I felt bad about. The money they are paying goes for the girl's heroin habit. So it ends up in the pusher's pocket who ends up on the schoolyard peddling more. I don't regret one arrest."

Crystal, a hooker, admitted that "business has been terrible. They've scared off all the men. I used to make $300 a night. Since that lady cop went in I can't even pay my electricity bill. I'm movin' out of this town."

JAPANESE PRINTS—A visitor takes a close look at the exhibition of Kiyoshi Saito's works at a Tokyo gallery. While the art print market in Japan has long been patronized by the foreign community, now print shops report the Japanese are becoming increasingly interested in their own art.

Art Print Market Prospers in Japan

By KATHRYN TOLBERT
TOKYO (AP) — The American woman showed the dinner guests around her Tokyo home and proudly pointed out the framed art works hanging on every wall.

"This is our Maki. This one over here is our Sekino, and over there is our Saito. That one up there is Kawada," she said, calling the Japanese prints by the names of the artists.

The guests nodded in recognition. The print market in Japan long has been patronized by the foreign community, and the modern print business got its start with the interest of American occupation forces after World War II. It has been growing steadily since.

An association of foreign women in Japan has been holding print shows of works by living artists annually for the past 20 years. This year they sold 796 prints in three days for a total of more than $U.S. 49,000. The money, after the artists receive 50 per cent, is used for a scholarship fund.

While foreigners made up 90 per cent of the buyers for Japanese graphic art 20 years ago, today print shops report the Japanese have become increasingly interested in their own art and now are 50 to 60 per cent of the customers.

Yuji Abe, owner of the Yoseido Print Gallery and Store on one of the Ginza's side streets, attributed this to a change in education. He said that after World War II printmaking was taught in Japanese schools for the first time, something he considered remarkable in view of Japan's long history of graphics.

"Oil painting and water color painting have a more Western feeling and most teachers of this are influenced by Europe. But prints are Japanese. That's why they finally started teaching printmaking and the history of prints," he said.

Tadasu Watanabe, proprietor of one of Tokyo's oldest print shops — the Watanabe Store was opened by his father in 1906 — said that the Japanese, in their postwar affluence, have taken an interest in interior decorating and are spending money more freely. Foreigners, on the other hand, have faced a worsening exchange rate, making the prints cost more for them.

Price of prints starts at around $U.S. 16. Most fall in the $33 to $66 range, but well known artists such as Kiyoshi Saito regularly get $165 and more for one print.

Watanabe discounted investment as a reason for buying.

"Before the oil shock about three years ago, maybe there was a great feeling for buying for investment," he said. "But now there is none of that feeling. Only those who really like the art buy it. That makes us very happy — to have earnest customers. To buy for investment is a mistake. They should trust their eyes."

As the print market prospers, more artists have become able to support themselves by the sale of their prints, although it is still difficult for all but the established names to make a comfortable living that way.

Opening lead - ten of spades.

Let's assume you're in seven hearts and West leads a spade, which you win with the king. It's not difficult to see that the grand slam is cold if the clubs are divided 3-2, so all your thoughts are devoted to the possibility that the suit is divided 4-1 or 5-0.

If you draw trumps right away, you would be staking the outcome entirely on a favorable club division. But, even granting that the odds are about 2 to 1 in favor of finding the clubs divided 3-2, this would not be the right way to play the hand.

You can increase your chances substantially by drawing only two rounds of trumps and then playing the A-K of clubs. As it happens, you learn that the clubs are divided 4-1 when East discards a spade to the second round of clubs.

It is now clear that West started not only with four clubs but also three trumps. East would surely have ruffed the king of clubs if he had the only missing trump. You therefore continue with the queen of clubs and ruff a club in dummy to sew up the contract.

It may be argued that this method of play runs the risk of having the ace or king of clubs ruffed. This is true enough, since East might very well have been dealt one club and three hearts instead of one club and two hearts.

But the answer to this contention is that you can't make the contract if either defender was dealt a singleton club and three or more trumps. It therefore costs you nothing to draw only two rounds of trumps and play the A-K of clubs to see where you stand.

Remember Anastasia? You may have seen the Ingrid Bergman movie this past weekend, and I'm sure you've read much of the interesting fiction that has been written about the Grand Duchess who was murdered (we were told she was murdered) in Ekaterinburg in 1918 (we were told it was Ekaterinburg in 1918). We are told that the Tsar and his entire family were brutally murdered, but since no bodies were found, you can just figure how many interesting theories and stories were soon circulating about what happened.

As is often the case, however, none of the theories or stories can hold a candle to the true account for excitement, drama, and intrigue. Yes, in truth the Tsar and his family did escape, and the story of that escape is indeed fantastic. No fiction writer could have dreamed up anything like this true account. As for Grand Duchess Anastasia, yes, she was murdered, but not in Ekaterinburg in 1918. She was murdered in Chicago in 1968. And Anastasia's brother, Aleksei, Tsarevich of all the Russians is alive.

Yes, this is the most interesting story we've latched onto in a long time. The entire story is in a little reprint pamphlet titled, THE TSAR'S BEST AGENT. The author is Alan Stang.

Want more info on the subject? The Tsarevich publishes a monthly bulletin called DOUBLE EAGLE, and a subscription costs $24 a year. It is available from H.I.H. Aleksei Nikolaevich Romanoff, H.T.S. & G.D.R., Post Office Box 281, Murray Hill Station, New York 10016.

AIRPORT NEWS

By SANDY WOODMANSEE

Just a reminder to all you pilots that the biennial flight review will be upcoming in June. See John for more information. The Fayette County Pilot's Association will hold a fly-in planning meeting at the airport on April 22, 1976 at 7:30 p.m. Coffee and refreshments will be served. Anyone wishing to help is welcome.

All veterans should be aware of a bill which is presently under discussion in the Veterans Affairs Committee that will do away with the G.I. bill for flight training and correspondence courses. I will keep you posted on developments.

Some of the incoming aircraft have been K-D Tool's Aerostar, Thomas Industries' twin Beech, a National Guard helicopter stopped in several times, Don and Pat Fairbanks stopped in from Cardinal Aviation in Cincinnati in their helicopter. Pat was at the controls after an absence of about five months, she said. Many other aircraft have stopped in for fuel or just a visit.....

If any of you subscribe to the Flying Magazine, you may have noticed a book review entitled, "The World's Worst Aircraft". One mentioned was the Maxim Gorki (that was really its name, no kidding). It had a wingspan bigger than a Boeing 747, set size records as it lugged a movie house in the fuselage, a printing press in one wing, and a photo darkroom in another. And it actually flew - for a while anyway - on eight engines. Sounds like a fun book to read and is by author James Gilbert, published by St. Martin's Press.

Local pilots flying have been Bob Lundquist, Don Simonton, Joe Kingery, Dick Curtis, Louis Poole, Larry East, Ron Ballard, Doug Smith, Steve Gilliland, George Teets, Pat Piper, Bob

Wilson, Kevin Mallow, Mark Merritt, Ron Doucette, Dick Holder, Millard French, Bob Meenach, Jack Patton (nice to have you back again, Jack) and Wally Coster.

Don't forget the April 25 fly-over to Hagerstown, Ind. for dinner. Contact Norman Merritt for information and if you have an aircraft with room for passengers, be sure to let him know.

Six non-traffic cases heard in local court

A Xenia man, ordered to stay out of Washington C.H. for six months, and three bad check verdicts were among the results of Monday's Washington C.H. Municipal Court session.

Clarence E. Deer, 63, of Xenia, was fined $100 with a credit of $30 for time served in jail for disorderly conduct. Judge Robert L. Simpson ordered Deer to leave Washington C.H. immediately and stay away for six months.

Deer's conviction stemmed from a recent incident at the Stop 35 restaurant at the intersection of U.S. 35 and I-71 in which he created a disturbance.

Charles E. Ward, 51, of Greenfield, was fined $100 and sentenced to 90 days in jail with all the time suspended, for passing a $41.04 bad check at the Kroger Co. store Clinton Avenue, on Jan. 21. He was also placed on probation for one year.

A Mount Sterling woman, Mildred

Walters, 38, was fined $100 with all the amount suspended and sentenced to 30 days in jail with all the time suspended provided she make restitution for a $128.23 bad check passed at Kroger's on Feb. 1.

Rhonda Lingo, 21, of Williamsport, was fined $75 and sentenced to 30 days in jail with all the time suspended for passing a bad $55.81 check at Kroger's on Dec. 22, 1975.

A $100 bond was forfeited when William H. Thompson, 56, of Room 18, Washington Inn Hotel, failed to appear in court to face a disorderly conduct by intoxication charge.

Jim Minney, 25, of 1013 Dayton Ave., was ordered to pay costs of damaged property, and pending this fulfillment, a charge of destruction of property was dismissed.

A charge against Chris Noes, 19, of 625 Vine St., of assault was dropped by the prosecuting witness.

Fighting continues in Lebanon

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — The new truce supervision committee said today that Palestinian troops would form a buffer force between Beirut's warring Moslem and Christian street fighters, but meanwhile the fighting raged without letup.

Police said about 100 persons were killed and 160 wounded by mortar and rocket fire during the night. One of those killed was the 16-year-old grandson of Pierre Gemayel, whose rightwing Phalange party has the largest Christian militia in the year-old civil war.

Police also reported that more than 150 persons were kidnapped but that most were released after a short time.

A new cease-fire, agreed to under Syrian pressure during the weekend, was to have gone into effect at midnight Monday. But the deadline made no difference in the fighting in the capital and nearby mountain towns.

Decisions made by the leaders were not transformed into orders to the hodgepodge of street armies, reflecting the leaders' tenuous control over their forces and their distrust of each other.

As leftist Moslem and Palestinians leaders met Monday night to discuss ways of enforcing the cease-fire, leftist gunmen were attacking Phalangist positions in the Beirut port area.

Similarly, long after Gemayel subscribed to the truce, Christian gunmen were firing mortar and artillery shells into Moslem positions in the charred downtown hotel district and nearby commercial streets.

Suit names auto dealer

TOLEDO, Ohio (AP) — Atty. Gen. William J. Brown has charged an automobile dealer here with failing to provide proper service on auto repair work.

In a suit filed Monday in Lucas County Common Pleas Court, Brown accused Brondes Motor Sales of charging customers for unnecessary and unauthorized and sometimes

"shoddy" repairs. The dealership was also alleged to have charged for work that was not done.

Brown asked for a permanent injunction against further violations of the state consumer law. He also asked the court to order Brondes to establish a compliance program with an escrow fund to pay for reviews of the operation by his office.
